Winter returned to Georgia with a vengeance yesterday, blanketing the northern part of the state with a 2-to-6-inch snow and spoiling Atlanta's Easter observance with near-freezing temperature and a hailstorm early in the morning which was followed by a cold drizzling rain during much of the day.

Furs and heavy coats concealed millady's new spring finery—if she even chose to wear it. The official minimum was 35 degrees and the overcast skies

'COMES TOO EARLY,' SAYS WEATHERMAN

"Easter just hadn't oughta come so early," the weatherman grumbled yesterday as he contemplated the gloomy outlook and shuddered at the thought of what the general public was thinking about him. "Just let me arrange to have it postponed until about the middle of April and I'll promise everything would be much better. Certainly it couldn't possibly be as bad as this."

which never once showed any signs of clearing allowed a rise of only eight degrees to a maximum of 43. A low of 30 degrees is forecast for this morning.

The snowstorm forced Governor Rivers and a party of road officials to cut short an Easter inspection trip over north Georgia scenic routes and to return to Atlanta.

Members of the party spent Saturday night at Vogel State Park and found that a blinding snow was falling when they awakened yesterday morning. They reported the fall extended to within 15 miles of Gainesville and estimated that it ranged in depth up to six inches.

The hail struck shortly before 7:30 o'clock in the morning and was accompanied by general downpours of rain which held attendance at the Grant field sunrise service below that expected. Umbrellas, raincoats and overcoats were in evidence to blot out sight of the annual Easter parade of fashions.

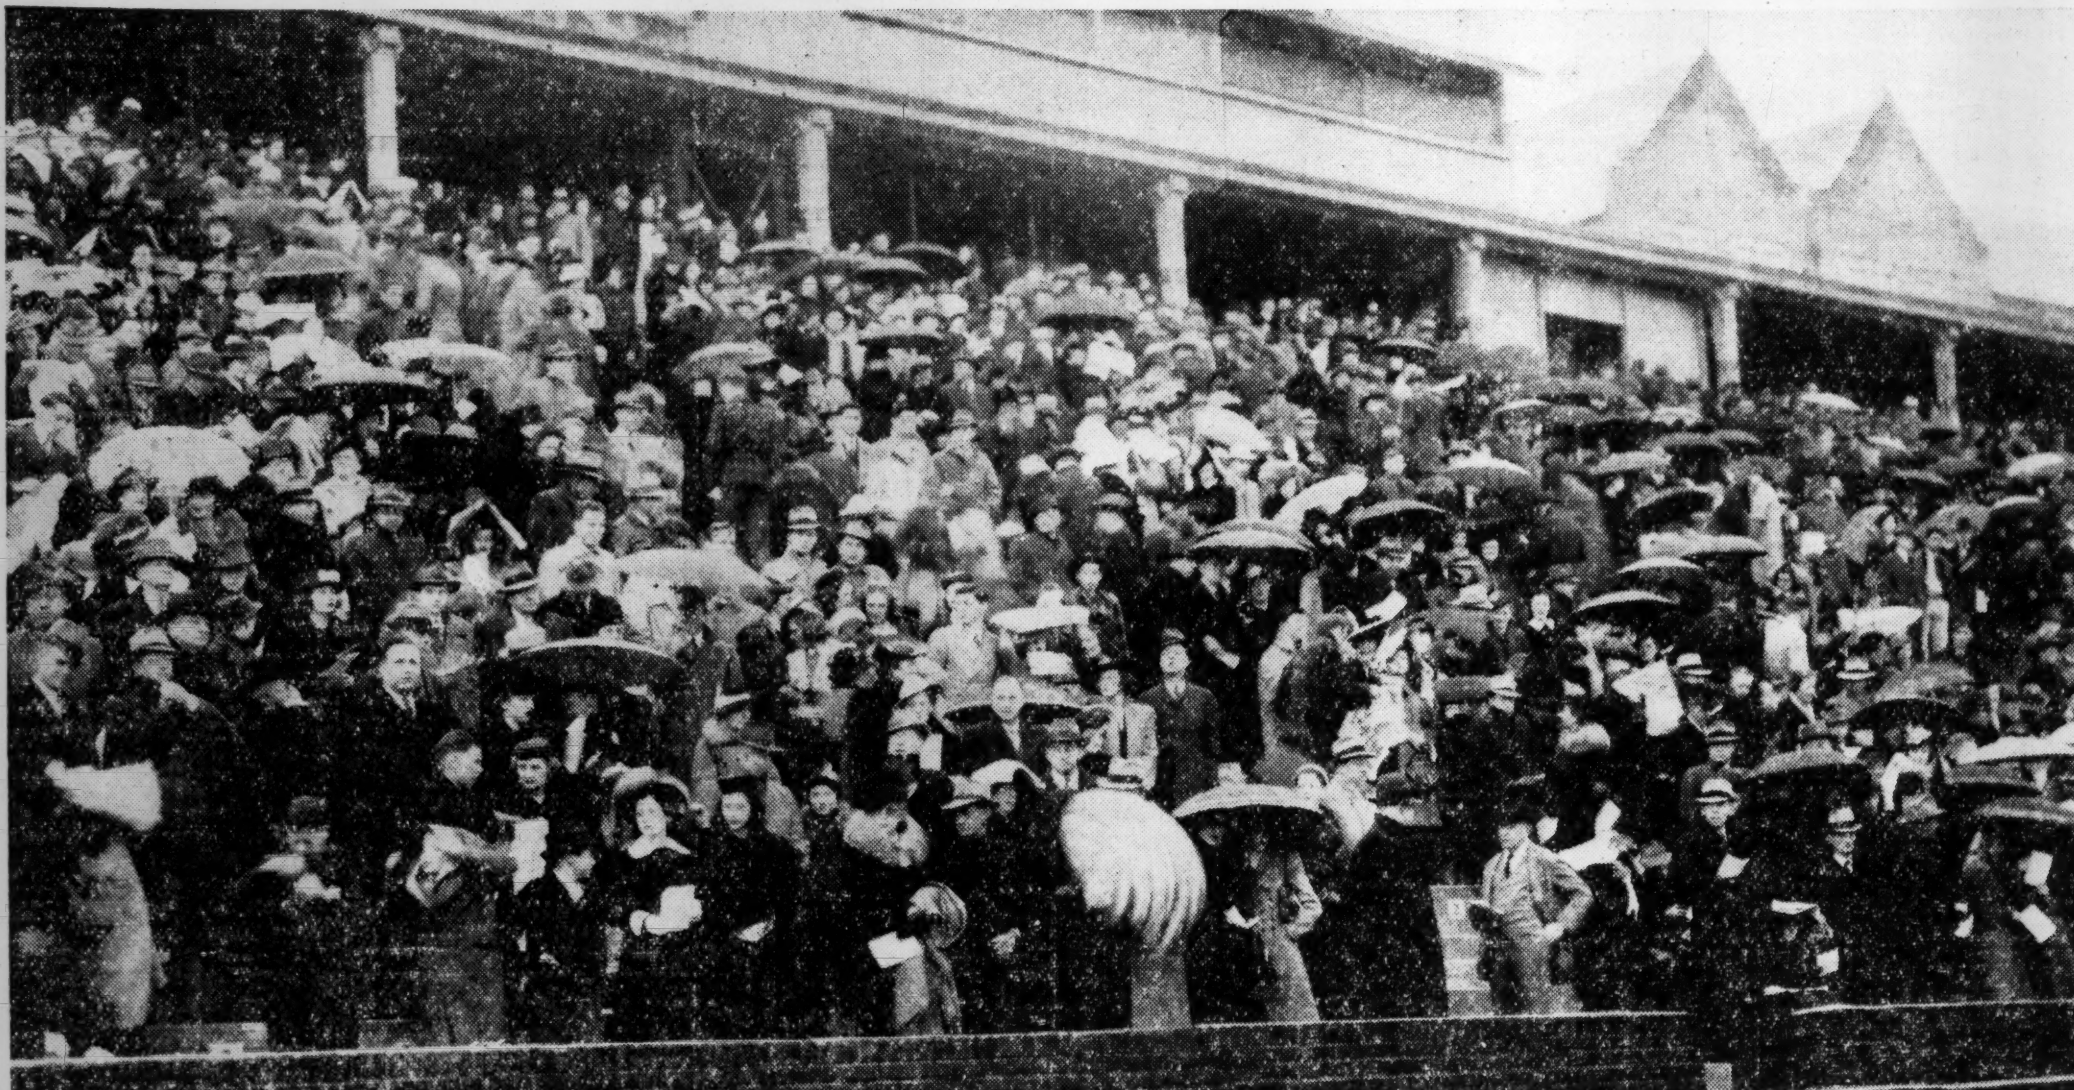

Virtually every church in the city, however, was reported packed to capacity and thanks to a temporary lull during the late hours of the morning and early in the afternoon, churchgoers were enabled to miss most of the day's precipitation.

Kept At Fireside.
But the rain began again a little later in the day as the elements uncorked a full bag of unpleasant weather tricks and outdoor activities of all kinds were reduced to an absolute minimum. Cozy fireside chats replaced "Peachtree promenades" and the "Easter parade" consisted principally of getting to church—and back home—without damage to new clothes.

Air line officials said that virtually all flights here were run in spite of the adverse weather but near-zero readings slowed operations in other parts of the country.

A portion of the crowd which attended the Easter sunrise service yesterday morning at Grant field is shown here. Showers came soon after the service began, but they did not drive the reverent men and women away. They opened up their umbrellas, reached for newspapers and remained until the end of the service, which was not halted because of the downpour. The crowd was estimated at approximately 10,000 persons. Dr. Ryland Knight, pastor of the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church, delivered the Easter sermon. One of the features of the service was a vocal solo by Mrs. Myrtis Trimble Pate. After the early services, the multitude scattered to attend church services throughout the city.

SEVEN ARE KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Four of Those Killed
Are From Other States;
Three Seriously Hurt.

Death stalked Georgia's highways yesterday, bringing the week-end traffic toll to seven persons—only three of them Georgians—and serious injury to at least three others, the state patrol reported. The dead:

George Fisher Battersby, 42, of Alto, Ga.
Charles Wells, 53, of Maun, Ga.
Mary E. Sakosky, 36, of 2701 E. Second street, Dayton, Ohio.
Mrs. W. H. Ward, of Brunswick, Ga.
Charles Hoag, 60, of Cranford, New Jersey.
Elmer Swanner Jr., 20, of Miami, Fla.
Horace Chaney, 45, Negro, of Greenville, S. C.

Battersby, a salesman who moved to Alto three weeks ago from West Philadelphia, Pa., was killed when hit by an auto one-half mile south of Alto Saturday night.

Wells was killed when the auto in which he was riding overturned near Butler, Ga., after a head-on collision with a car said to have been driven by Edgar Watson, Negro, 30, of Maun, Ga. Watson was being held on a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

Hoag, Swanner and Chaney were killed when an auto driven by Clancy on state Route No. 1, four miles north of Swainsboro. Seriously injured in the crash were an unidentified white man and Elbert White, 25, Negro, of Greenville, S. C.

They were taken to a hospital at Swainsboro. The Dayton, Ohio, woman was killed when her car skidded from the road four miles north of Cartersville on U. S. Route 41. Mrs. Jack Sasset, 26, of New Kensington, Pa., passenger in the car, was seriously injured. She was taken to a Cartersville hospital.

Mrs. Ward, elderly Brunswick woman, was struck by an auto Saturday night and died several hours later.

Britain's Easter observance was featured by some 10,000 weddings. In some cases both bridegroom and bride were in khaki or blue.

U. S. Has Bad Weather.
Throughout the United States snows and temperatures ranging from freezing to below zero put a chill on the annual fashion parade in many cities.

TATTNALL GATES SHUT ON GALLOGLY

'Hello, Dick, Glad To See You Back,' Official Welcomes Prisoner.

By ROMNEY WHEELER.
REIDSVILLE, Ga., March 24.—

(AP)—The ponderous main gate of Tattnell prison closed behind life-terminer Richard Gray Gallogly tonight, ending a 1,200-mile return from Texas where he fled 173 days ago.

Public Safety Commissioner Lon E. Sullivan and seven state patrolmen ushered the Atlanta "thrill" slayer into Georgia's "Alcatraz of the piney woods" shortly after dusk.

The greeting from prison officialdom was simple and brief.

"Glad to See You," "Hello, Dick," said H. L. Foote, assistant record clerk, "glad to see you back."

"Hello, Mr. Foote," was Gallogly's reply. Gallogly waited briefly in an outer hall and then was hustled to a receiving room to be fingerprinted and docketed. Later he surrendered his stylish blue worsted suit and donned grey denim.

Captain A. M. Ankers, night superintendent of the prison, accepted custody of the prisoner from the state troopers.

Refuses Food.
Three cars, loaded with armed patrolmen, escorted Gallogly from Atlanta to Tattnell after his return from Dallas, Texas.

The prisoner, his hands manacled to a heavy leather belt, huddled beneath a trooper's overcoat and stared at the countryside as the cars sped south at a mile-a-minute clip. He refused food when the party halted for lunch at Griffin, and remained under guard in the car.

Today's admittance was his second to the state prison. He explained he was brought here briefly in the early part of 1939 for a physical checkup, then returned to Atlanta.

The 30-year-old Gallogly, scion of a prominent Atlanta family, was detained at state police headquarters in Atlanta for half an hour today en route here. He said he had gained about 23 pounds since he fled Georgia and now weighs 165 pounds. (Gallogly expects tougher time in Tattnell this trip. Story on Page 2)

WORLD 'TIED UP' BY BIG SUN SPOT

Magnetic Storm Isolates U. S. From Europe for Nearly Three Hours.

NEW YORK, March 24.—(AP)—A huge spot on the sun played hob with communication today.

Disruption of telegraph and short wave radio service was the worst in 30 years, some experts said. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, largest land-line in the country, said it was the worst case of traffic impairment its engineers could recall.

Cable communication between Europe and the New York Associated Press office broke suddenly at 10:20 a. m. One channel was restored at 1:50 p. m. and a second at 3:07. Service to Latin-American countries was unaffected, inasmuch as it follows a north-south course.

The direct cause, according to Director William Barton, of the Hayden Planetarium, was an "enormous" spot on the sun, resulting in severe earth currents.

What happened was this, he said: The sun spot is caused by a tremendous electrical disturbance on the sun.

The disturbance bombards the earth with a stream of electrical charges.

The earth's magnetic force deflects this stream of charges toward the north and south poles and the stream, in heading toward the poles, disrupts other electric currents traveling at right angles, like conflicting streams of traffic.

The Aurora Borealis, or northern lights, is a manifestation of this rush of particles to the poles; passing through the atmosphere it lights it up just like a current illuminates the gas in a neon-tube sign. The Aurora was not visible last night, however.

For four hours and 10 minutes, starting at 9:30 a. m., (Atlanta time), the Associated Press network of 285,000 miles of leased wires was out of use—except in a 500-mile radius around New York City.

The A. T. & T., besides being cut off entirely from Europe for hours, reported domestic telegraph service disrupted intermittently as far away as Omaha, Kansas City and Dallas.

The Associated Press' 10,000-mile wirephoto network, over which pictures are transmitted on telephone wires, went out of order at 1 p. m. (Atlanta time), and was still not functioning normally three hours later.

Harvard scientist analyzes yesterday's sun spot, explaining origin of such phenomena. Page 5.

10,000 Atlantans Brave Rain To Attend Dawn Easter Rites

Resurrection of Christ Is Commemorated Here at Mass Service Held in Wet, Wind-Swept Grant Field.

By LUKE GREENE.

As the darkness melted into the gray, bleak dawn of Easter, approximately 10,000 Atlantans yesterday morning filed into Grant Field and sat reverently through showers of rain and hail to pay homage to the Prince of Peace who approximately 1,940 years ago arose from the grave.

From the west stands which many times in the past have echoed with the cheers of sports-loving throngs urging their football heroes on to victory came the strains of "Low in the Grave He Lay."

"Up from the grave He arose, With a mighty triumph o'er His foes."

In unison the religious folk lifted their voices. As they sang they faced a white cross situated on the opposite side of the field, symbolic of the risen Christ.

Hundreds of umbrellas rose above the heads of the crowd which filled the west stands when the rain began. Other men and women attempted to shield themselves with newspapers. The downpour lasted for only a few minutes, however. The vocal solo by Mrs. Myrtis Trimble Pate, which was scheduled before the sermon, was postponed until near the end of the service.

Dr. Ryland Knight, pastor of the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church, delivered the Easter devotional. He spoke of death, but said it should not be thought of in terms of the grave or the cemetery. He stressed the fact that Christian men and women should think of their departed loved ones in terms of what they did.

He mentioned Henry Grady. If a person came to Atlanta, he said, and wanted to see something symbolic of Grady, you would not want to take him to the southern cemetery's grave.

"Instead," he continued, "you would want to point out to the visitor that great newspaper—where Henry Grady worked and lived, and where his spirit still lives."

The invocation was delivered by the Rev. R. Wiley Scott, pastor of the Central Congregational church. The Rev. James L. Baggett, pastor of the First Baptist church, of College Park, read the scripture and Dr. Edward G. Mackay, pastor of the First Methodist church, led the congregation in prayer. Dr. William V. Gardner, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, who presided, pronounced the benediction.

"He arose a victor from the dark domain, And He lives forever with His saints to reign."

GARDEN LECTURES BEGIN TOMORROW

Summer Flowering Bulbs Will Be Discussed at First School Session.

Summer flowering bulbs and other timely garden topics will be the subject of the daily discussions by Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown at the Constitution's Annual Spring Garden School, opening tomorrow at the Atlanta Woman's Club.

Mrs. Crown, local garden expert, will lecture at 10 o'clock each day through Thursday, discussing garden planning, planting, and flower show exhibits.

A daily prize of $15 for the garden club with the largest proportional attendance and a grand prize of $25 for the club with the greatest total attendance will be given. Friends may register for a club.

At the class tomorrow Mrs. Crown will tell gardeners what bulbs may be planted now. Many gardeners do their bulb planting in the fall, but hyacinths, montbretia, rhizomes, amaryllis, calla, canna, crinum, and 15 or 20 other flowering bulbs may be planted in the spring. Some of these thrive in the sun, others are better suited to shade, and the height attained by this group of summer flowers is from a few inches to eight feet. There is always a place in a garden or yard for bulbs, inexpensive as well as the rare varieties.

Wednesday's classes will be on "Annuals and Their Place." Mrs. Crown will discuss perennial borders planned for continual blooming; rock gardens with annuals, and cutting gardens, porch boxes, and climbing vines for quick shade.

The final session will be a lecture by Mrs. Crown on "Winning Ribbons in a Flower Show."

Learn from Mrs. Crown the inside story of gardening. The classes are open to the public absolutely free.

SPRING FASHIONS FORCED TO HIDE BENEATH COATS

Snowdrifts 10 Feet High Pile Up in Maine Valley; Florida One of Few States To Escape.

By The Associated Press.

A wave of wintry weather held most of the nation in its grip yesterday as Easter celebrants sought to usher in the new season much earlier than usual.

Snow matched the whiteness of the Easter lilies in many places and sub-zero and sub-freezing temperatures defied the wearing of Easter finery.

High winds piled snow to depths of 12 feet over many New York highways, while Tennessee and Arkansas were centers of heavy snowfall that extended well down into the Georgia and Alabama mountains.

Snow 12 Feet High.

Extreme cold prevailed in the midwest, with readings of 10 below zero at Park Falls, Wis., zero at LaCrosse, Wis., and Minneapolis, 7 below at Grand Forks, N. D., and 5 below at Duluth.

Snowdrifts 10 feet high kept Easter worshipers home-bound in Maine's St. John river valley.

Aroostook county in Maine reported gale winds and temperatures ranging from 15 degrees above to two below zero.

Roads along the Maine-New Brunswick border were impassable, train schedules were canceled and highway crews temporarily gave up the job of snow clearance.

Temperatures in New York state ranged from zero to 14 above and highways in western, central and northern sections of the state were blocked.

Bar to Easter Parades.

Snow also interfered with the Easter parades in Pennsylvania, upper Michigan, and from North Dakota southward. Sleet fell in Oklahoma, Missouri and Nebraska.

The freezing weather extended southward to North Carolina, Tennessee, northern Mississippi, Arkansas and the panhandle of Texas. Georgia, Alabama and Louisiana were expected to experience weather below 32 degrees during the night. Five inches of snow fell at Nashville and the temperature was around 24 degrees all day.

A record blanket of Easter snow—6.1 inches—fell in Knoxville, Tenn., but most churches were filled with Easter worshipers and hundreds attended sunrise services.

67 Degrees in Miami.
Miami presented a contrasting picture. Approximately 30,000 worshippers gathered on the sands of Miami Beach for sunrise services and a mild 67-degree temperature made Easter finery comfortable. Easter paraders thronged the resort.

Fairly mild temperatures at Jacksonville, Fla., enabled 8,000 persons to turn out at sunrise services where airplanes flew over in the formation of a giant cross.

Throngs paraded in the warm weather at New Orleans where the thermometer reached 82 degrees during the day, but cloudy skies, dropping temperatures and an intermittent drizzle during the afternoon sent many home.

DEPOSITS SOAR.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) American bank deposits rose 13 per cent to the unprecedented total of $56,076,000,000 in 1939.

This total, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reported today, was held on last December 30, by the 13,553 banks insured by the agency.

U.S. Lawyers Strongly Opposed To Third Term for Roosevelt

Only 29 Per Cent of Attorneys Interviewed in Gallup Poll Favor President's Candidacy; Authors, However, Give F. D. R. Majority.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.

Director of American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 24.—If you happen to ask your lawyer for political advice this fall in case President Roosevelt runs for a third term, the chances today are that he will probably tell you to vote Republican.

A survey conducted among a cross-section of the law profession, listed in standard legal directories, shows that lawyers themselves are predominantly against a third term for that other well-known member of the bar, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The Gallup Poll

Asked in the Institute survey, "If President Roosevelt runs for a third term will you vote for him?" U. S. lawyers divide as follows:

For Third Term 29%
Against 71%

In taking their stand against a third term, the lawyers joined ranks with another special stratum of American voters, namely persons listed in "Who's Who in America," who were found even more overwhelmingly against a third term in an Institute checkup this winter.

Other Institute tests indicate that there may be a split among United States intelligentsia on the point, however, for in a special survey conducted in conjunction with the "Saturday Review of Literature" recently a cross-section of American authors and writers was found slightly in favor of another term for Mr. R.

The three special groups are arrayed as follows on the question:

THIRD TERM?	Yes	No
Lawyers	29%	71%
"Who's Who"	21	79
Authors	53	47

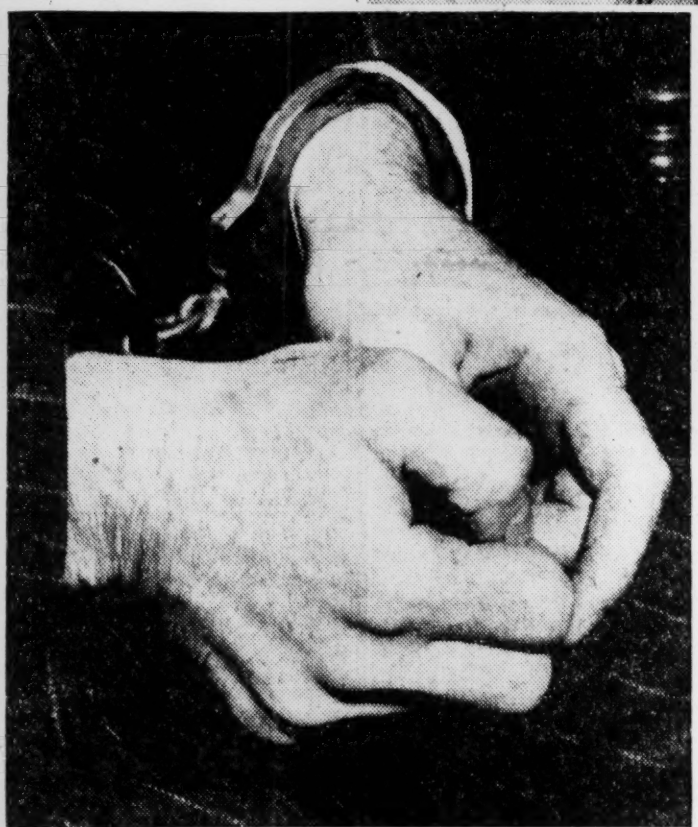

WRITER'S WIFE DIES IN 11-STORY PLUNGE

Mrs. Anna Dosch-Fleuret
Complains of Illness at Dinner Table.

PHILADELPHIA, March 24.—(AP)—Mrs. Anna Dosch-Fleuret, 48, wife of a widely traveled news writer and lecturer, fell from a 15th floor window of a friend's apartment last night and died in a hospital four hours later.

Mrs. Dosch-Fleuret and her husband, Arno, residents of Portland, Ore., and New York city, were dining with friends when she complained of dizziness and left the room. A few minutes later the others heard a shriek. Mrs. Dosch-Fleuret was found unconscious on the roof of an adjoining building 11 stories below.

She was Dosch-Fleuret's second wife, a former French citizen he married after covering the World War for the old New York World. He later joined International News Service, resigning two years ago to lecture and write.

They took no chance this time. Here is a close-up of the new type handcuffs used to bring Richard (Dick) Gallogly back from Dallas, Texas. The wristlets are attached to a belt which goes around the waist.

Gallogly, Headed for Tattnell, Expects It 'Tougher This Time'

Fugitive Life-Termer Is in Pleasant Mood on Arrival Here.

By LEE FUHRMAN.

Wearing handcuffs and accompanied by three armed state troopers, Richard G. (Dick) Gallogly, fugitive life-termer, was returned to Atlanta yesterday following a virtual non-stop 1,000-mile circuitous trip by automobile from Dallas, Texas.

Gallogly, neatly dressed in a blue pin-stripe suit, showed little signs of fatigue after the journey from Texas, where he lost his legal fight to prevent extradition to Georgia.

He remained about 45 minutes at the state highway patrol headquarters on Confederate avenue, then was driven in another car to Tattnell prison. During the brief stay at patrol headquarters, he talked freely and pleasantly with reporters.

Asked about plans for continuing his fight for freedom, he said: "I've thought about the federal courts on a dress angle, but I don't know how far I can go on that line. I can't say now just what I will do. I haven't talked to my lawyers yet."

In answer to the question, "How do you feel about possible retaliation from prison guards and other authorities?" Gallogly smiled wryly, twirled his hands nervously and said:

"If it isn't tougher this time, then I'll be mistaken."

He said that his wife, Mrs. Vera Hunt Gallogly, and his mother, Mrs. Worth Yankey, were still in Dallas, and that he did not know about their plans. He praised the treatment he received from Texas authorities.

"They're a fine bunch of men," he said. "They treated me all right. They had to do their duty and they did it."

The trip to Georgia began about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and Gallogly and his "party" arrived in Atlanta at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The route taken was through Texarkana, Ark., Hope, Ark., Little Rock, Ark., Memphis, Chattanooga, Dalton, Cartersville and thence to Atlanta.

Captain D. Frank Simmons, of the state patrol, said his rather round-about way was taken due to "certain rumors" that an attempt might be made to "spring" the prisoner somewhere along the route between the Dallas and Tattnell prison.

The trip was uneventful, however. Captain Simmons said that he drove most of the way, but that the other officers, Lieutenant O. W. Whiteside and Corporal W. P. Grinstead, also took turns at the wheel. Gallogly sat on the front seat.

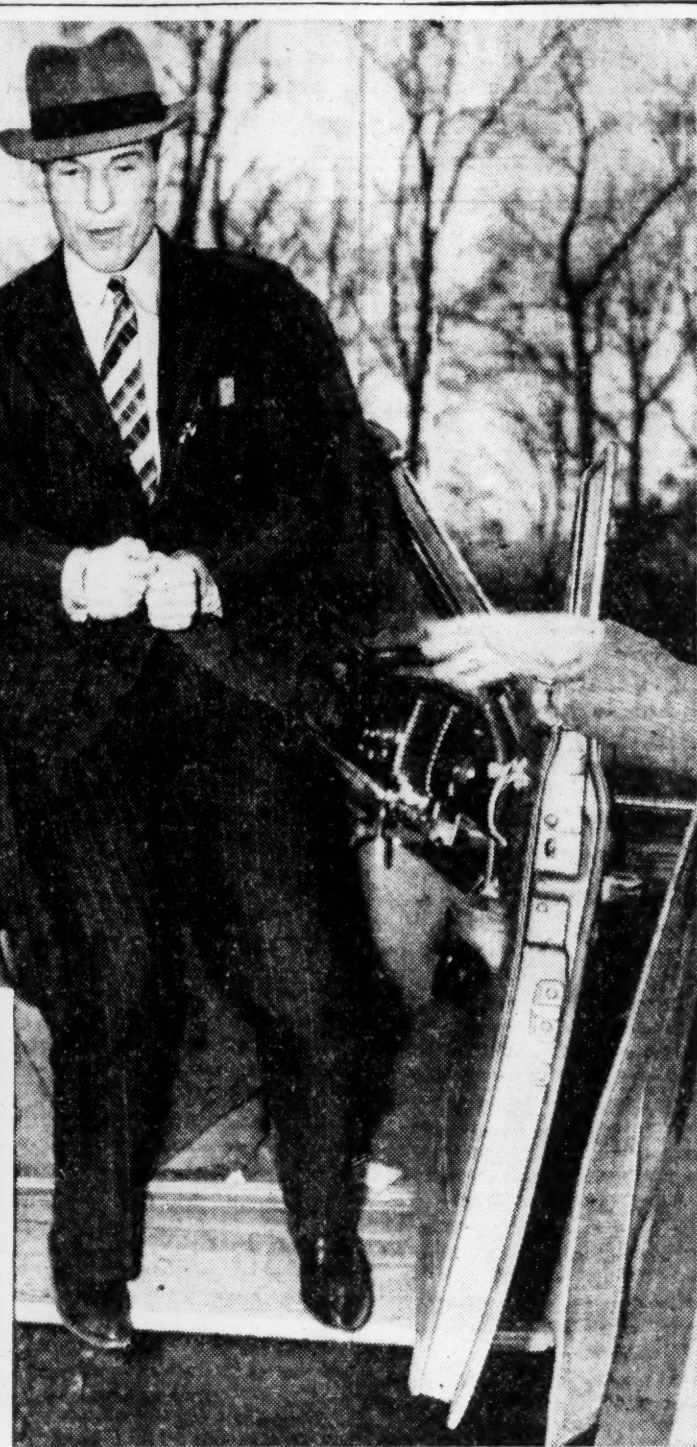

For 300 miles out of Dallas, Captain Simmons said, Gallogly wore leg-cuffs in addition to the handcuffs. The handcuffs were attached to a belt around Gallogly's waist. Commissioner of Public Safety Lon E. Sullivan said these leg and handcuffs were of a new type, developed and used by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The party encountered rain out of Little Rock, and bad weather from then on. At some points, sleet fell. Only a few stops were made en route, for food and gasoline. The trip consumed 21 1-2 hours.

Gallogly, although rather pale, appeared well. He said that he had gained 25 pounds since his stay in Texas and that he now weighed about 165 pounds.

In a statement, Commissioner Sullivan said, in part: "Gallogly says he is coming back to 'hell in Georgia.' Judging by the evidence in his plea for a pardon, most of his 12 years' imprisonment have been spent in office work, hotel rooms and, during the past four years, in hospitals.

"I hope the penal authorities

Nattily dressed and looking hale and hearty—he has put on 25 pounds—Richard (Dick) Gallogly, Georgia chain-gang escapee, steps from a state patrol car at headquarters after a 1,000-mile trip from Dallas, Texas. After a brief rest, he journeyed on to Tattnell to begin anew his life sentence. Notice the handcuffs and the overcoat slipping off his shoulder.

MRS. W. P. HUIE, 45, DIES AT ELBERTON

Prominent Church Worker Formerly Lived in College Park.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. ELBERTON, Ga., March 24.—Mrs. W. P. Huie, 45, prominent Elberton church woman, died at her home here about 11:30 o'clock tonight following a three-day illness.

She was the former Miss Nora Oakley, of College Park, and moved to Elberton about 18 years ago with her husband, former Elbert county farm agent and now a well-known businessman. She took a leading part in the work of the First Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Huie is survived by her husband, a son, Wade Huie Jr., a student at Emory University; a daughter, Dorothy Frances; her mother, Mrs. J. A. Oakley, of College Park; three sisters, Mrs. Bessie Murray and Miss Annie Kate Oakley, of Richmond, Va., and Miss Cora Oakley, of College Park; three brothers, R. K. Oakley, and C. T. Oakley, of Birmingham, and F. M. Oakley, of Augusta.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

CREGAR WILL HEAD GEORGIA PRINTERS

Officers Named at Macon Session of Typographical Conference.

MACON, Ga., March 24.—(AP)—Delegates to the Georgia Typographical Conference in semi-annual session here today elected C. M. Cregar, president of the Savannah union, to head the organization for the next year.

Cregar, who presided over the meetings in the absence of H. A. Bowick, of Columbus, retiring president, was elevated from the second vice presidency.

Joe T. Griffin, Macon Mailers' Union, was re-elected first vice president, and C. B. McCook, Macon, will treat him just like any other murder convict, no better, no softer."

Gallogly, a former Oglethorpe University student who was given a life term in the slaying of Willard H. Smith, drugstore clerk, in 1928, and his honey-haired wife made a sensational escape last October as Gallogly was being transferred under guard to Tattnell from an Atlanta hospital. Two guards who were in the car at the time of the escape were unarmed.

Last Friday, attorneys for the young Atlanta gave up their fight to prevent his return to Georgia.

J. H. GRIFFIN, 67, POPULAR TEACHER AT BOYS' HIGH, DIES

'Uncle Jim,' Mathematics Instructor, To Be Buried at Stone Mountain; School To Close.

James H. ("Uncle Jim") Griffin, 67, professor of mathematics at Boys' High school for the past 22 years and one of the best known figures in the city's educational circles, died yesterday afternoon at his home in Stone Mountain.

Apparently in the best of health until about 10 days ago, he conducted his classes as usual a week ago Friday but was taken ill shortly after returning to his home that day.

Funeral services are to be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Stone Mountain Methodist church, of which he had long been an active member. The Rev. Henry Dillard will officiate and burial will be in the Stone Mountain cemetery under direction of White & Company, of Covington.

Dr. Willis A. Sutton, Atlanta school superintendent, announced last night that the school would be closed in time to allow students and faculty members to attend the services.

Professor Griffin was a native of Newton county and spent much of his early life near Covington. He had been a resident of Stone Mountain for more than 40 years and took a leading part in the community's religious and civic activities, having served several terms as mayor and as magistrate. He was educated at old Emory College, Oxford, Ga., and later attended Chicago University. He was a member of the Sigma Nu fraternity.

Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Jennie Rankin; a sister, Miss Ella Mae Griffin, and three brothers, J. J. Griffin, of Stone Mountain, and A. M. and A. P. Griffin, of Decatur.

BREAK IS EXPECTED IN FLOGGING PROBE

Sensational Developments Due Within 48 Hours After Busy Week End.

After a week end of "beating the bushes" of south Fulton for new evidence and checking stories already told, Fulton county's double-barreled investigation of flogging activities was believed headed for a sensational development.

When this development would come, neither the county police nor the solicitor general's office would say, but there was every indication that a "major break" would come within the next 48 hours.

Officials Keep Quiet.
All sources connected with the sweeping investigation were contacted but they politely refused to discuss what they termed "surprising developments," all of which served as further indication that the probe had reached the stage for grand jury action.

The investigating staff—some from the solicitor general's office and others from the county police—worked most of Saturday night and all day yesterday checking and rechecking evidence and interviewing additional victims.

None of these investigators would give any indication of what had been found.

Key Figure Hinted.
Among the possible developments would be a sudden calling of the grand jury into special session to consider evidence gathered by the investigators while still another would be the arrest of several alleged key figures in the probe.

The name of one of these key figures has never been made public but investigators say they have found, in checking scores of flogging cases, that he has played some part in practically every one of them.

One investigator intimated last night that the arrest of this figure was imminent as gradually they have woven a net of circumstantial evidence about him.

PLANES REPORTED OVER NETHERLANDS

AMSTERDAM, March 24.—(AP) Netherlands air patrols reported at 10:20 p. m. (3:20 p. m. Atlanta time) tonight that several foreign airplanes were flying across the northeastern part of the country in a southwesterly direction.

The identity of the planes was not immediately disclosed. Early today lookouts had reported several unidentified planes had flown over the northern provinces, also in a westerly direction, and that others, headed east, had passed low over Friesland province.

Chic Eve Curie Foresees Long War for Europe, Declares That the French Cannot Turn Back

On the Lighter Side, She Says She Lives Alone and Likes It.

By LUKE GREENE.
Smartly-dressed Mile. Eve Curie, daughter of the discoverer of radium and one of the most distinguished women in France, believes there will be no permanent peace in Europe any time soon.

She said as much last night shortly after her arrival in Atlanta by plane from Charleston, S. C. She will lecture at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Glenn Memorial auditorium under sponsorship of the Atlanta Wesleyan College Alumnae Club.

The pretty French ambassador of good-will, who is recognized as being about as well acquainted with the world as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, said France is interested in a real peace, and that cannot come until the destruction of the Nazi regime.

For Reasonable Peace.
"We cannot go on as we are going now," she said. "And we cannot go back. We are fighting for a reasonable peace in Europe. We do not propose to stop until we get it. Any sort of terms now could mean only victory for Germany."

Mile. Curie speaks fluent English, although she would like to get rid of her French accent. She talks in an understanding manner about her people and their problems. She tells you about the women of her country and what they are doing to carry on the war while the men are under arms.

She explained there is no need for a military mobilization of women. Their job is not at the front. They must fill the places left vacant by the men. They must go into the factories and man the machinery while their husbands and sons take care of the real fighting.

No Frenchman thinks America should come into the war, she said, although this country will play a definite part in carrying it forward. The role will be economic. France does not need more men to fight. Already 5,000,000 have been mobilized. She needs supplies and armaments and the United States is one of the nations to which she looks.

Lover of Science.
Mile. Curie can speak authoritatively on many things. She loves science, although she insists she is not a scientist. She has written a biography of her famous mother, which took approximately two and one-half years to complete. But she doesn't plan to write any more books in the near future.

"Loving science is like loving music," she said. And then she shifted to a discussion of music, which is one of her many interests. She studied music and for a time wrote criticisms of music for French newspapers. She admits she has the "newspaperman's viewpoint."

When asked about her fame as

Mile. Eve Curie, daughter of the discoverer of radium, points out on the map the cities in the United States she has visited as France's ambassador of good will.

one of the best-dressed women in the world, she laughed and modestly cast the subject aside with a single sentence.

"I don't suppose I'm so well-dressed," she said. "But naturally I love clothes as every woman does." However, the load of luggage which was carted up to her hotel room bore out the fact that she takes considerable interest in her clothes.

No Husband for Her.
Mile. Curie is not interested in landing a husband, thank you. She is having too much fun traveling over the world and seeing things.

As evidence of her interest in globe-trotting, she brought out a large map of the United States on which she had charted in bold lines her itinerary since she arrived in this country January 5. She will return to France by clipper April 17. Her next stop is Cincinnati.

She was met at the Atlanta airport by Mr. and Mrs. William Elmer, French Consul Charles Loridans and Mrs. Loridans, Mr. and Mrs. Harold McKenzie, Mrs. W. W. Davison and Miss Anabel Horne.

Her subject tonight will be "Science and the Woman."

BRITISH SUB SINKS GERMAN COAL SHIP

Freighter Sent Down Off Danish Coast; Captain Is Taken Prisoner.

COPENHAGEN, March 24.—(AP) The shell-scarred German freighter Edmund Hugo Stinnes, 2,289 tons, sank with her cargo of coal today off the west coast of Denmark, where she was attacked last night by a British submarine.

She was the second Nazi merchantman sunk by a British submarine since the war began. The 4,947-ton carrier Hedderheim was torpedoed last Thursday nine miles east of Scaw (Skagen), which leads into the Baltic sea.

Danish naval authorities immediately began an investigation to determine whether the attack on the Stinnes took place inside territorial waters.

(In Berlin, DNB, official German news agency, said the vessel was attacked without warning inside Danish territorial waters.)

The Stinnes, bound from Hamburg to Copenhagen, had almost reached Scaw at midnight last night when she received radio orders to return to the Danish port of Esbjerg, presumably because British submarines were believed near by.

TWO-CENT RAIL FARE IS EFFECTIVE TODAY

NEW YORK, March 24.—(AP) Eastern railroads will reduce their one-way coach fares from two and a half cents to two cents a mile at 12:01 o'clock tomorrow morning. Round trip fares will range as low as one and a half cents. The exact rate being determined by a sliding scale according to distance traveled.

Major bus lines will put sharp reductions into effect on longer runs which meet competition from the railroads.

The railroads will retain their three-cent a mile pullman rate.

Forrest Epps Herndon, 18, Loses Battle to Pneumonia

Tech High Senior Led School's First Roller Hockey Team.

Forrest Epps Herndon, 18-year-old Tech High senior who organized and was captain of the school's first roller hockey team, died in a private hospital last night after a game but losing battle against pneumonia which began two months ago.

Young Herndon, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Herndon, of 838 Boulevard, first started the hockey team early last fall and dreamed of the day when he would be able to lead his teammates to victory over their traditional rivals, Boys' High.

Illness Halts Practice.
Almost daily for weeks and months he led them through practice drills, always looking forward to the first real game. Then came illness and he was forced to go to a hospital.

But his fellow students carried on without him and at last the game was scheduled for March 8. Although still ill, Forrest insisted on attending and he was taken to the rollerdrome in a hospital ambulance and watched the contest from a cot on the sidelines.

Rivals Won Game.
Boys' High won, 4 to 1, and Forrest returned to his hospital bed, disappointed but still fighting.

In addition to his parents he is survived by a sister, Mitzi Herndon, and a brother, E. F. Herndon Jr.

Funeral arrangements are to be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

PRISONERS OF WAR QUIT SPAIN FOR U. S.

SEVILLE, Spain, March 24.—(AP) The last two American prisoners of war in Spain, Alfred Anderson and Conrad Stoweja, of California, sailed for the United States today aboard the American export liner Exford.

The two fought for Republican Spain as members of the International brigade during the civil war.

Spring's Pilgrimage

In a world filled with the misery of mankind, the cares of existence and the bitter fulfillment of human failure, man has turned ever to the beauties of nature for refreshment, for surcease, and contentment. The humblest shack inhabited by the poorest of men or women is the brighter for a green shoot, or a brilliant flower. To flowers always man turns for beauty and the greatest mansion is great only if man has borrowed from nature to provide the setting.

This yearning often reaches its heart in the gardens that have had the tender care either of a community or an individual over a period of years. Only the most callous soul would become surfeited with the magnificent scenes the centuries have left to become a Georgia heritage.

Seldom, if ever, does one have the opportunity of seeing the best the state can offer in the encompassing period of the several weeks of spring in which nature reaches a peak of glory, heralding the death of winter and the birth of the months in which the earth gives of its bounties that man may live.

Just such an opportunity is afforded, however, in the Fourth Annual Pilgrimage of the Garden Club of Georgia, to Thomasville, Savannah, Brunswick, Columbus, Albany, Macon, Atlanta and Carrollton. It is a wonderland not be equalled in any nook and corner of the world. It encompasses all that a beneficent God has given mankind in nature, from the moss-hung magnificent oaks of the low coast to the wild beauties of the foothills. There is the gamut from lush beauty to the delicate glory of the dogwoods.

It would be a small soul indeed that is not enriched by this display of loveliness; a chill soul that does not yield to the call that is spring.

"He's the most wonderful person in the world," says Actress Doris Dudley, of the man she is to divorce. And women weep, as women should, because they're so misunderstood.

Plain Logic

The logic used by the Vatican City newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, in interpreting Russia's veto of the proposed Scandinavian defensive pact as a confession of further aggressive plans by the Soviet, is so plain and simple anyone should be able to see it.

It must be remembered the proposed pact was to be purely defensive in character. It was not aimed against any nation. Yet the government at Moscow refuses to permit such a pact, on the ground that it is aimed against Russia.

That is self-confession Russia already sees herself in the role of a future, and further, aggressor.

The past record of both Russian Soviet and German Nazi governments gives good outline of the probable future developments in Scandinavia. When Stalin thinks the time ripe, when the concessions wrested from the Finns in the recently dictated peace, have been consolidated, Russia will calmly announce a list of "provocations" which she will charge to the Scandinavian nations. Prominent in that list will be the very defensive alliance she now forbids.

Then the well-armed Russian armies will move in, against Sweden, against Norway, against Denmark, and the Soviet bear will have extended and tightened his crushing hug around European civilization.

In the meantime, of course, the free nations of the world will look on and attempt to find alibi for inactivity and comfort for premonitions in the assertion that the fate of other, even though heroic and free, nations like Sweden and Norway and Denmark—and Finland—is no affair of theirs.

A pressure of 3,500,000 pounds has been developed by a Harvard experimenter. No one knows why, as it hasn't been felt by congress.

In the south, a humane and broad-gauged court holds it is all right if the citizen calls a traffic officer a "bum," the bum.

In Germany, they say, the larger junk has gone into the melting pot for munition needs, and any hour now they will call in bridge prizes.

Medical circles consider the case of a patient with four lungs and three galls. The pursuit of a durable campaigner for the hard summer ahead is closing in.

The Why of Swindlers

H. G. Mitchell, manager of the Atlanta Better Business Bureau, speaking before the Civitan Club on Wednesday, asserted that "general apathy" among businessmen is the basic reason for success of so many fraudulent schemes.

Dishonest financial transactions, he said, mult American of $2,000,000,000 annually, because the average man "does not recognize fraud when he sees it."

Manager Mitchell is undoubtedly correct in his facts and his assumptions, yet he has ignored another factor which, in all probability, has as much as anything to do with the ease by which fraud is perpetrated. That is the persistent desire of almost all men, and women, to get something for nothing. And, as a contributory factor to this fundamental characteristic, the temptation to which many succumb, to themselves wink at law violation if they believe it will profit them.

A high proportion of frauds, of the confidence man's tricks, depend upon a guilty conscience by the victim to prevent him from revealing his victimization. Many a man has lost all his savings because he believed he could trick some one else. Well worked scheme after well worked scheme of the underworld succeeds because of this very propensity by normally honest men.

The way to decrease the annual "take" of crooks is for every man to resolve two things: First, whenever he is offered a proposition that has any unfamiliar feature in it, to refer it to the Better Business Bureau at once. Certainly, before he "invests."

Second, to avoid like the plague any proposal that involves unfair advantage against a third party, or organization. Avoid the lure of "easy" or "tricky" money and you'll save your own from thieves, nine times out of ten.

A western city schedules a canary exhibition and a cat show for the same dates. So far there has been no move to merge the two, as a cat show.

Unselective "Economy"

One well may wonder whether the nation is being penny wise and pound foolish when reading of reduction in the rolls of the Civilian Conservation Corps, the first since the inception of the corps in 1933. Particularly is this so when there are almost three applications for each vacancy to be filled in the enrollment this April.

The personnel of the corps will be reduced from 300,000 to 245,000 by July 1, and the number of camps will be cut from 1,500 to 1,227.

More than any other New Deal agency, with the single exception of the National Youth Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps has demonstrated its worth, both in making men of potential alley rats and in conserving the natural wealth of the United States. Beyond these, thousands of new recreation areas for the people of the crowded cities have been opened, and still there remains an almost limitless field for the work of the corps at its present strength.

Yet, when the economy ax falls, it seldom selects its victims, and the reduction in the rolls of the CCC is perhaps easier than the lopping off of some pet interest of a congressman or senator.

It would be difficult to total the millions upon millions of dollars saved by the work of the CCC and difficult to determine the thousands of lives rescued from the pool halls and street corners of the nation. But one may be sure it would encompass the greatest investment this nation has ever made. But economy is not selective.

The Fight on Cancer

Again this April the Women's Field Army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer will take the hopeful message of cancer cure throughout Georgia and the nation, seeking to bring to those who are ignorant and those who fear, the word that time and skill can mean a new happiness.

Cancer is terrible only in that it kills needlessly, because people are not familiar with the earlier manifestations, and because they do not know of the new miracles of medicine devised by all the skill of the physicians to combat a dread scourge.

The women's field army has accomplished a remarkable task in years past, but the work has only begun. Every year the bleak future of thousands is turned to happiness by its work. But every year thousands do not hear the message it seeks to spread, and so the following year the effort must be redoubled.

Every Georgian will want to co-operate with the women of the field army in an effort to take the message they bear to all whose lives may be saved and made happy by the care that physicians today can provide.

Editorial of the Day

SAVANNAH GETS STAMP PLAN

(From the Savannah Morning News.)

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has announced that the stamp plan for distributing surplus foods to needy persons will be put into effect in Savannah and Chatham county about April 15. He estimated that 16,600 persons in the county will be eligible to participate in the plan.

Counting its suburbs, where this plan will also be in operation, Savannah numbers more than 100,000 inhabitants. The plan is to be inaugurated here through the co-operation of city, county and Chamber of Commerce officials. The experiment has proved successful in Macon and other cities and there seems no good reason for it not proving beneficial here. According to the bureau of municipal research of Rochester, N. Y., where the experiment was first made, it worked because it benefited not only persons on relief but the merchants, especially the grocers.

Undoubtedly it is a boon to needy families to be able to buy 50 per cent more food for the same money. It is also better to have surplus farm commodities go to our own poor than to dump them abroad for what they will bring. It is to be recognized, of course, that the taxpayers have to foot the bill for the food stamps. This is simply an addition to relief costs. But it is one that commends itself to most of our people as the least painful method of solving two important problems.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

JIM FEELS BADLY TREATED WASHINGTON, March 24.—Postmaster General James A. Farley's Massachusetts statement that he is in the presidential race for keeps sounded too perilously like the similar Garner statement for the comfort of the New Dealers managing the third-term movement. It would seem to be an effective and permanent, if somewhat blunt answer to their predictions that "Jim will end by going along."

The statement has already been the subject of enough explanatory writing to make a volume the size of one of the larger Biblical commentaries. To those familiar with the recent Farley mood, however, his strong words were not surprising. He feels badly treated by the President. He has been assured, without qualification, that the President does not intend to run again. At the same time, his candidacy has been greatly hampered by the third-term movement. Under the circumstances, he is not "going along" in the usual sense of the phrase.

That does not mean that Farley will publicly oppose a third term, if the President chooses to run for one. It does mean, on the other hand, that unless the foreign situation creates a national emergency, he will never lend the third termers any aid and comfort. It also means, on the basis of the Farley statement, that as a sign of his position, he will allow his name to be presented to the party convention.

Despite the announcement of State Chairman Burke that the Massachusetts delegation is for the President first, it is authoritatively reported that a certain number of the Massachusetts delegates, such as former Governor Ely, are actually for the President last. Farley can count on support of this sort in several other delegations also. If the President runs, Farley's candidacy will get nowhere, but the mere presentation of his name on the convention floor will preface a bad split in the party. Such indications of dissent are the worst politics possible. Because he does not wish to be accused of sour grapes tactics, Farley cannot fight the third term in the open. But the impression of men who know him well, that he is still ready to do everything in his power to prevent it, now seems to be confirmed.

KEEPING THEM HAPPY One of the most amazing governmental vagaries was underlined by the recent appearance of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. before the senate banking and currency committee to oppose repeal of the silver purchase act.

The real reason the administration wants the power to buy silver in the world market is that silver purchases are a convenient way of subsidizing the Mexicans and the Chinese.

From every standpoint of national strategy, passing a little surplus cash to the beleaguered Chinese government is a wise and sensible thing to do. Subsidizing the Mexicans is perhaps more questionable, but is ardently defended by the treasury on the grounds that the Mexican economy, deprived of the support of American silver purchases, would collapse in ugly ruins. If this is so, the Treasury and State Department are probably correct in believing that the next step would be really serious internal disorder in Mexico, and that it is again worth spending a little cash to prevent it.

It is difficult to imagine a more fantastically foolish way of paying subsidies, however, than through the silver purchase act. This remarkable measure, which Senator John Townsend of Delaware, is now doing his best to remove from the statute books, was originally enacted as a sop to about a dozen silver senators. Silver exercises a disproportionate political influence.

The entire industry employs perhaps 8,000 miners. The Treasury would have saved in the neighborhood of $900,000,000 (without, of course, keeping the Chinese and Mexicans happy) if every single silver miner had simply been kept on the public pay roll for the last six years at a salary of $2,000 annually. With the Chinese and Mexicans taken care of by open donations, the saving would still have been around $500,000,000.

To be sure, this might not have satisfied the silver senators, who also represent the mine owners. Not content with forcing the Treasury to buy domestically mined silver at 71.11 cents an ounce, or more than double the world price, they also insisted on silver purchases in the world market to drive the world price up. Consequently, the Treasury has to date accumulated 2,200,000,000 ounces of silver at an overall cost of a little more than $1,000,000,000. The best joke of the whole business is that the silver senators established $1.29 an ounce or nearly four times the present world price, as the official or "monetary value" of silver. Therefore, the difference between what the Treasury paid for its vast and utterly useless hoard, and the hoard's imaginary worth at the "monetary value," is now called a "silver profit," the expenditure of which is being earnestly urged.

Facts In Figures

About Atlanta

That is the title of a small pamphlet put out by the Chamber of Commerce. Maybe you haven't one. So today we'd condense some of the info. and you can either paste this column in your hat or give it to a friend. We're nothing if not a booster for Atlanta, Gee-Asse.

So, here goes into the factual, headfirst.

Atlanta: 32d city in the nation, by population.

Stands in 13th place in bank clearings.

And 18th if you measure by postal receipts.

Has 118 bank offices of federal government departments and agencies.

Ranks fourth of all cities of the United States in amount of fire insurance premiums cleared annually.

Don't Leave, We've Just Started.

There are 902 factories in Atlanta.

The 902 make more than 1,500 different commodities.

Atlanta is located 1,050 feet above sea level, highest altitude of any city of its size, or larger, in this country. Denver excepted.

There are 53.2 women in Atlanta for every 48 men. Fewer out the danger of leap year for your-selves, lads.

The population, by races, is almost exactly two white for one Negro. To be exact, 66.7 and 33.3 per cent.

110 passenger trains daily serve Atlanta.

As well as 42 passenger planes, regularly scheduled.

And, 182 buses.

And, over 75 regulated, fixed freight bus routes.

And, more than 500 railroad freight cars, merchandise and package, which originate here and move out every day. This is exclusive of solid carload loadings.

And, the railway express handles more than 2,800,000 shipments of this city per year.

There were 92,684 automobiles and trucks registered from Fulton county in 1939.

There were 88,338 telephones listed in Atlanta last year.

Postal receipts for 1939 were $1,129,433. (The 31 covers the postage on that package you sent Aunt Minnie at Christmas. Remember?)

This city is the third largest telegraph center in the world.

It is the eighth American city in volume and service of air mail.

For 1940, there are 88,504 electric meters measuring out the monthly bills for Atlantans, while 64,344 gas meters add their tick, tick to the song of dollars and cents.

Of schools, we have 56 elementary, 8 junior high and 5 senior high, with 5 special schools and 7 night schools.

There are 33 colleges and institutions of higher learning in and around Atlanta.

We ought to be saintly folks. There are 350 churches in the city, with total membership exceeding 170,000.

Well, let's get on with it: The value of manufactured products, in 1937 (latest figures available) for Fulton county, was $195,714,695.

That same year there were 27-124 wage earners in Fulton county, and the annual pay roll was $24,079,590.

Going to 1935, for latest figures on trade, we find there were, then:

3,833 retail businesses and 809 wholesale. Net sales, retail, for that year were $136,842,000 and, wholesale, $328,474,000.

If you'd live in Atlanta, there are:

Westbrook Pegler, whose column, "Fair Enough," usually appears in this space, is away on vacation. During his absence, Hugh Johnson will contribute a daily column in his place.

Universal Panning. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 24.—Senator O'Mahoney's proposal to tax machines has had a panning from every editorial that I read—and I have to read a good many. One recurring note is that Joe hails from the great open spaces of Wyoming, which hints that he can't know anything about machinery. I happen to hail from the great open spaces of Oklahoma, but that isn't going to prevent me from hailing in on this argument. We cow hands can at least read the machinery pages of the mail order catalogs.

I can't recommend the senator's bill. In the first place, although I have studied it, I don't understand it. I have a dim idea that it taxes the producer who makes more than average use of machines and from the avails, subsidizes the producer who uses less than the average machine power, hence employs more man power.

I can't go for that. It is not taxing for revenue. It is using the power to tax as a power to punish one group and reward another in proportion to their degree of departure from or compliance with a government rule as to how they should run their business. It is both "punitive" and "incentive" taxation and both are dangerous ground.

Impossible To Apply. Furthermore, it would be utterly impossible to apply. The labor wage element in the cost of various products varies from 10 per cent to 90 per cent and is largely caused by forces entirely beyond the producer's power to control. It would wreck the existing industrial pattern. Finally, it is a barrier to free invention and progress.

Nevertheless, there is something very valuable in part of what the senator has at the back of his thought. We ought to re-examine this idea of financing all social legislation by taxes on pay rolls or give more thought to taxes on machines or machine hours.

The rush toward machine production and away from employment isn't altogether caused by advances in science and invention. Every time a manufacturer installs a new machine operation displacing labor, he makes a certain calculation.

Put the present labor cost of that operation in one column. Then calculate the total cost of installation of the new machine. From that, figure a rate of interest on that investment. Then compute from its estimated life, the annual rate of cost for its replacement. Estimate the cost of repairing and upkeep. Add these all up and compare the total with your labor cost. Consider that, in slack season, men can be laid off and machines can't. Their cost is fixed and continuous. Unless there is no distinct cost advantage in installing the machine operation no labor is going to be laid off in that factory.

When this calculation is made because of some great labor saving invention, government ought not to interfere. Labor leaders are the first and loudest in saying that.

Exact Reverse. But the exact reverse of that is true when the lesser cost of machine operation is caused not by invention, but solely by governmental action increasing labor cost by a tax on pay rolls. That literally lashes the employer away from taxed labor and toward untaxed labor-saving devices to keep his costs even.

A tax on machines rather than on pay rolls to produce exactly the same revenue from any particular plant, would have a double effect in the opposite direction—the direction of increased employment. The cost of labor relative to machines would not merely not increase but the spread in favor of labor and employment would be widened by the exact amount of the tax. The total effect in the direction of employment would be double the amount of the tax.

I would like to see somebody kick a hole in that argument. In the name of common sense, when our principal national problem is unemployment, why should we be using the principal national power (taxation) to increase unemployment when, with the same revenue and no greater burden on anybody, it could be used with double effect to reduce it?

FOOD STAMPS FOR ATLANTA In the winter of 1938 I spent an afternoon in the home of Gunnar Myrdal, the brilliant Swedish senator, some 20 miles from Stockholm.

It was Myrdal who sponsored most of Sweden's "New Deal." He had made a survey. It demonstrated that persons within a certain income group could spend so much per day for food. If they had children the amount of money for food was not increased.

Those married couples within that income group which were without children could live better than those with children. Healthy children are the riches of a state.

Myrdal went to work. His survey gave the positive facts. He introduced into the Swedish parliament a plan whereby the unemployed and those who had children and made less than a certain amount per week, could buy food by a stamp plan, at prices less than that paid by the ordinary purchaser.

In this way children obtained more milk, more fresh vegetables, more fruit, more butter.

The Swedish farmers were urged not to grow less but to grow more, although, of course, there still was crop control.

The net result was a stepping up in national health, especially among the children.

The food stamp plan now being tried in various cities in America grew out of the Swedish plan. We have adapted it to fit our own needs.

Atlanta needs a food stamp bureau. It is obvious the county is not going to be able to supply enough money properly to feed those in need of food.

Atlanta's hungry people need the food stamps.

NO QUICK CURE If it were possible to put the facts before the people there would be an immediate response. The average businessman; indeed, the average person busy with a job, with a home to go to and with the usual interests of home and family, cannot believe the situation as it actually exists. Let's take DeKalb county.

It's next door. It is one of the best counties, if not the best, in Georgia. It has better government. It is a semi-urban county. It is a rich agricultural county.

Since it is next door its facts take on a closer meaning. DeKalb county's clinic board has checked and found that approximately 1,300 to 1,500 children in the county school system are suffering from malnutrition in one degree or another.

That's a pretty word for starvation. They are busy raising money to supply lunches.

If that condition exists, within the school system, how much worse must it be in Fulton county and how terrible indeed it must be in the poorer counties of the state!

DIXIE HIGHWAY

Editor, Constitution: Permit me to congratulate you on your editorial relative to the Dixie highway.

You will recall what a time we had getting this road built under our old friend, "Uncle John Holder," but this road was not built for heavy traffic and today there are several freight lines running box-car trucks over it day and night. With all fairness to the state of Georgia, the road has held up unusually well.

If the State Highway Department of Georgia will build four feet of concrete shoulder on each side of this road and fill in about three inches of crushed rock with a good top binder, we will have a road that will last at least another dozen years.

North Georgia is entitled to have at least its main arteries kept in passable condition. For this road, by actual count, ranks second in the state in heavy traffic.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Jack Troy and the rest of the sports writers have got me keyed up to the point that I have got to see a baseball game pretty soon. I kept trying to find some way to go to Savannah while the Crackers were in training, but it wouldn't work out. And when I passed along by one of the school grounds the other afternoon and saw a bunch of boys out there playing baseball, I had to stop and watch them. I just couldn't help it.

But for the fact that I hope to be well along the way to Homosassa when this column reaches the average breakfast table, I think I would just have to hunt up some place Monday and watch a game of baseball. Going to Homosassa with Mr. Hudson and Mr. McCord and Major Quinn is good enough to offset even the urge of baseball. I am looking forward to this drive across Georgia and Florida on Monday, through the peach orchards and the fresh-ploughed fields and along the banks of the Suwannee river and before sundown to the lovely village of Homosassa, with its river and its bays and its keys and its glorious golf. But more of this anon.

Baseball is our great game, without a question. I even put it ahead of Chinese checkers and horse shoes. They tell me that more people go to see basketball than baseball, and basketball is grand. I love football, too. But baseball is my game, without debate.

That picture they had the other day of Emil Malino flying through the air like a flamingo, snagging a line drive, got me completely down. If I had had the money, and the "boss" would have allowed it, I would have chartered a plane right then and struck a bee line for Savannah.

Every time I pass Ponce de Leon ball park, I have to hold my little old car with tight reins to keep it from turning right in to the old hitching post. At night I dream about Paul Richards, squatted there behind the plate, and those curves slipping by the futile stabs of the enemy's bats. I have imagined seeing Anderson and Ryan and Burge making double plays until I feel like I should have my pockets full of rain checks. I have pictured Hafey rifling those grass cutters from over in the hot corner across to Burge to beat out the fleetest racers for the first sack. I have imagined Steamboat running around the circuit watching Burge touch the bases for a home run in the ninth inning with two men out and the score tied. All that sort of thing, you see, has got me up to the point that I need very, very much to see these Crackers play. Well, its just 18 more days until April 12, if I figure correct. Seiah.

$40,000,000 GIVEN FOREIGN CHARITIES

U. S. Aid to Other Nations Increases.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP)—Americans gave $40,000,000 last year to foreign charities compared with $37,400,000 in 1938, the Commerce Department said today.

The increase was due to larger remittances by Jewish organizations which sent $11,100,000 abroad, mainly for relief, rehabilitation and resettlement of Jews of Europe and the Near East, compared with $7,100,000 contributed the previous year.

Protestant contributions declined by $900,000 to $16,500,000. Educational and scientific donations fell by $1,400,000 to $6,800,000.

Sun Spots Are Giant Tornadoes In Solar Regions, Scientist Says

Electrified Particles Shot From Sun Are Drawn Toward Earth.

In the following dispatch, Dr. Donald Howard Menzel, astrophysicist attached to the Harvard observatory, gives a clear explanation of the causes behind today's communication-wrecking sun spots. Twice winner of the A. Cressy Morrison prize of the New York Academy of Sciences, he is author of many books on this subject.

By DR. DONALD HOWARD MENZEL.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 24. (UP)—The intense magnetic storm that played havoc with electrical communications on Easter Sunday was undoubtedly of solar origin.

Although scientists do not yet understand exactly how the sun causes such storms, our present knowledge suggests a picture somewhat as follows.

Surge Every 11 Years.

It is well known that sun-spots, which are giant tornadoes in the solar atmosphere, vary in number and intensity from year to year, with maxima about every 11 years.

We have recently passed through such a maxima. Even though the number of spots are believed to be declining, large groups still occasionally appear.

At present there is one big group, visible to the eye (through smoked glasses, of course) not far from the center of the disk. Electrified particles, shot from the sun, have been apparently directed earthwards by the intense magnetic field associated with these spots.

These electrified particles, swarming through the upper atmosphere, absorb and hinder the radio waves. On reaching the ground and passing by electrical conductors, they induce random currents that disrupt communications.

It is probable that the solar corona is composed of streams of such particles. Apparently the earth has just encountered the tail end of such a coronal ray.

If the solar corona could be observed regularly instead of only at times of total eclipses we would be able to foretell in advance when the earth is about to encounter a streamer and thus produce the magnetic storm.

PACIFIC COAST LINES DISRUPTED BY STORM.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—(P)—Magnetic disturbances which crippled eastern and trans-Atlantic communication facilities today, also hampered Pacific coast circuits. Trans-Pacific communication by radio was impossible most of the day.

At the height of the disturbance here, a peculiar hum was audible in telephone receivers.

Officials of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company said there was little trouble completing local calls, but long distance service was difficult for a period this morning.

Call in The Game

Theory A writer recently dwelt at length on Emil Leonard's knuckle ball pitch. And in describing the pitch as a dry spitter, the writer said it always has a tendency to break sharply downward.

This, of course, is not true.

Sometimes, the Leonard knuckler breaks sharply downward. Yes, but more often than not it breaks from east to west. It has been known often to break in two different directions before reaching the plate.

Recently Clark Griffith said he had never seen a delivery like Emil Leonard's knuckler, explaining it never does the same thing twice.

Also of recent date, Rick Ferrell swore that sometimes the knuckler breaks upward.

Paul Richards made the same assertion when he was catching him here.

Richards had no easy job catching Leonard and neither did Ferrell last year. The latter had more passed balls charged to him than he ever had before.

So the pitch unquestionably does many strange things, including breaking from east to west, upward and downward.

The catcher always knows when it is coming. He calls for it. He often calls for it on the third strike, so fine is Leonard's control of the pitch.

But to think that it always breaks sharply downward is purely theory. In practice, it's another story all together. A catcher wouldn't have so much trouble if the pitch always did the same thing.

Butterfly Pitch To describe Leonard's knuckler as a butterfly pitch is to hit a lot closer to the way the eccentric delivery acts.

On one of the rainy days in 1938, Manager Richards had the Cracker squad drilling under the stands at Ponce de Leon. This writer was curious about the Leonard delivery, inasmuch as Dutch was having so much success after Brooklyn had sent him away.

I asked Leonard to describe the pitch, and he responded:

"Why not put on a mitt? That will give you a better idea."

And so this writer does not have to theorize about what that fast floater does in approaching the mitt.

Sure, it breaks east and west. It sometimes breaks sharply down. And at other times you are positive it breaks up because you throw the mitt in front of your face to keep from getting hit.

Those who have seen a butterfly coming straight toward them can imagine how that baseball is doing.

The ball never turns in coming up to the plate. As the air pressure piles up in front of the ball, it dances, dips and sometimes seems to flutter.

Imagine, then, the plight of the batter who is trying to get set to hit such a pitch in the brief time he has. Leonard may win 20 games again.

A Thought The Crackers have a promising knuckle ball pitcher coming up in Lewis Carpenter, a former Tech ace.

Carpenter does not yet have the control of his pitch that Leonard does. But it acts just about as strangely.

Tom Hefey was batting against Carpenter recently. He saw the pitch coming and it looked all right. Suddenly, he ducked. The ball hit him in the back of the head.

The knuckler takes off like that once in a while. If it could be arranged, a duel between Carpenter and Leonard might prove very attractive for next Sunday week when the Washingtons and the Crackers play. Leonard is going to pitch for the Senators.

Carpenter, Woodstock, Ga., boy, has been coming along fine and Manager Richards may consent to the battle of the knucklers.

Night Baseball Last year Savannah was trying out the batter fouled one which went on over the stands.

The young catcher nipped off his mask as he wheeled and ran in front of the grandstand; here he crouched.

The crowd was puzzled as the catcher stood poised, waiting.

And then most of them saw it at the same time. The catcher had been partially blinded by the lights and he was waiting for a large moth to come down, thinking it was the ball.

Match play in the Ansley Park best-ball tournament will get under way today. Pairings for the first round follow:

SNOW DELAYS SECOND ROUND

Play To Be Resumed This Morning in $5,000 Greensboro Meet.

By BILL BONI.

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 24.—(P)—Rodney Snow was the first man to tee off today in the Greensboro open golf tournament.

By 10 a. m. snow was all over the course, three inches deep, and the second 18-hole round of the $5,000 winter tour fixture had been postponed until tomorrow.

Although the snow started early this morning, an estimated 1,500 galleryites turned out by the time the tournament officials decided it would be impossible to play.

Play will be resumed at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. By then, it is hoped it will be possible to sweep the greens. The boys always can tee up in the fairways.

"I wouldn't mind playing it that way," said Jug McSpaden. "At least it would be the same for everybody."

McSpaden will be right up with the leaders when play is resumed. The Winchester (Mass.) pro shot a two-over-par 73 yesterday which left him four strokes off the pace set jointly by North and South Champion Ben Hogan and Clayton Heafner, the "candy kid" from Linville, N. C.

A few players started out before the postponement was made official this morning. When they told Gene Sarazen it was his turn to tee up, the Connecticut squitter cracked: "You mean ski up, don't you?"

Snow May Delay Women's Qualifying.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 24.—(P)—An all-day snowfall which lasted into the night covered the greens and fairways of this golfing resort and made it appear unlikely that the 38th annual north and south women's golf tournament could get started before Tuesday. The 18-hole qualifying round was to have been played tomorrow.

Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, a former national champion, will defend her title in a field of more than 100 golfers, including such notables as Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga.; Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I.; Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C.; and the 16-year-old Bloomington (Ill.) star, Jeanne Cline.

Blind bogey players at West End missed the winning number for the second week in a row yesterday. The number was 74. Johnny Walton had a 72, and A. W. Duke got a 70.

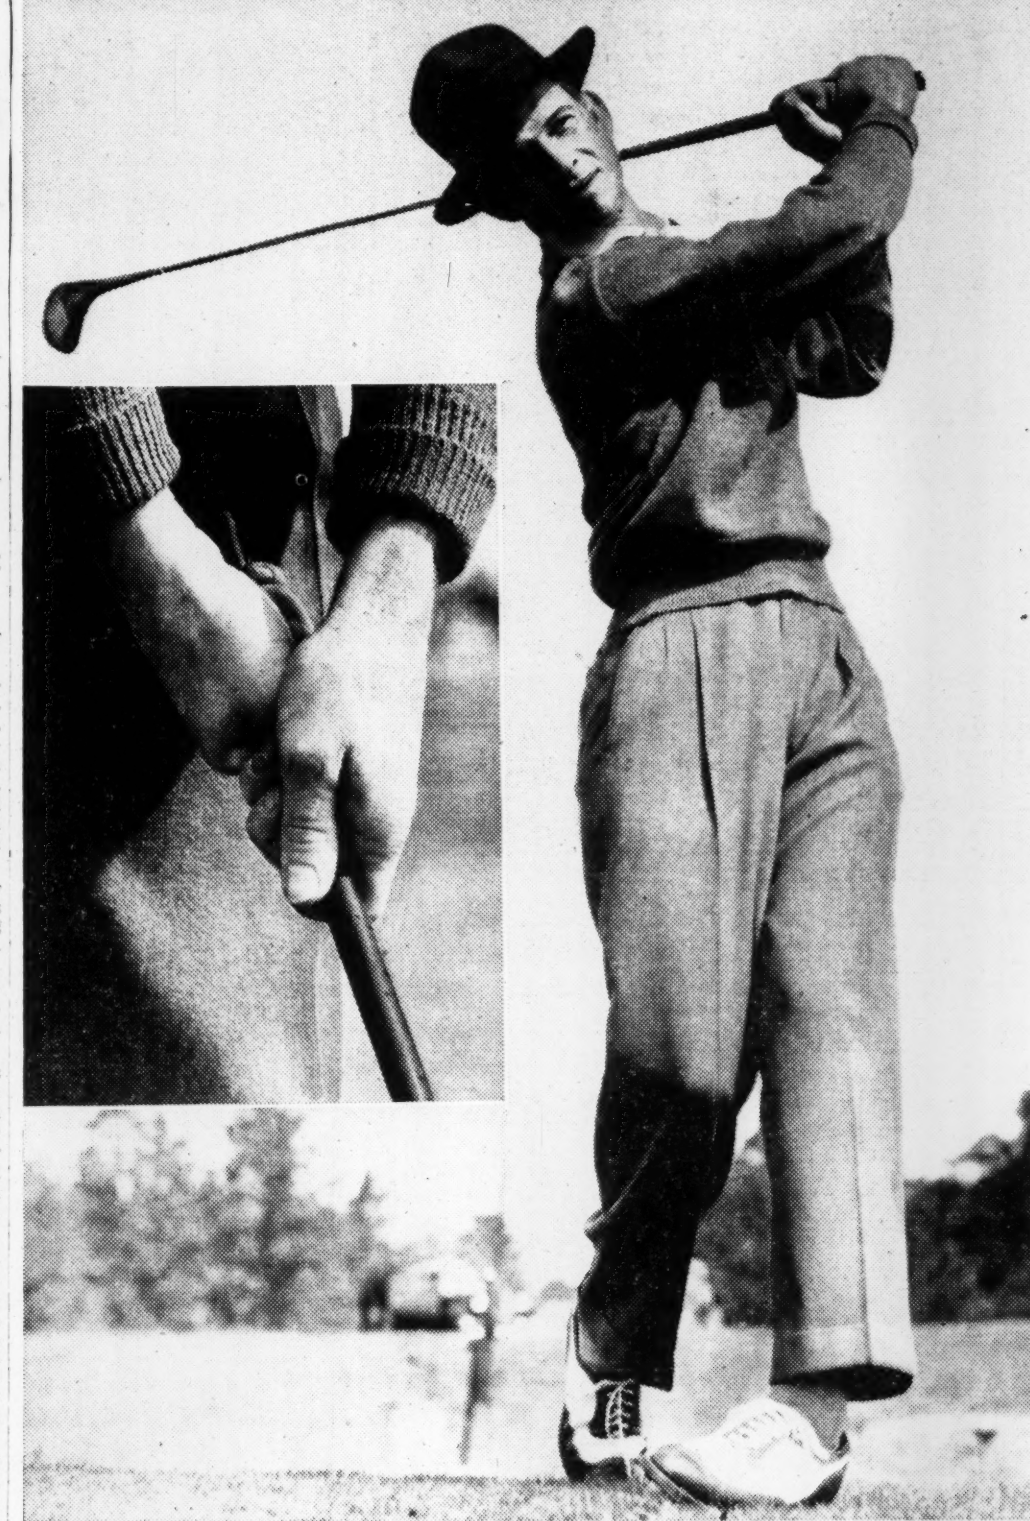

Phillips 66 Captures National A.A.U. Title

DENVER, March 24.—(P)—Mighty Phillips 66, of Oklahoma, won its first national A. A. U. basketball title after years of trying by beating its arch foe, the defending champion, Denver Nuggets, 39 to 36, before 7,000 fans in city auditorium last night.

Phillips, twice a runnerup for the most coveted honor in independent basketball, never lost the lead after Bill Martin, slick guard from Oklahoma University, sank a goal on an out-of-bounds play in the first minute of the second half.

SHUCKS AGAIN.

CROSS-HANDED CHAMPION—Bob McCoy is another Atlanta golf champion. He's the head man in the cross-handed division of the world's players. At least, he has a good claim on the honors. Bob really socks the ball as the picture of his swing indicates. In the inset, you get an idea about his grip. He doesn't put the thumb of his right hand down the shaft as you might imagine. He just grabs hold of that club as if it were a baseball bat. He doesn't know what he does with the left hand. "It's just some place to put it, I reckon."

Outfield Post Is Mauldin's Best Chance

Atlanta Boy, Realizing Weakness as Infielder, Set for Battle.

By TOM MCRAE.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 24.—Manager Paul Richards said tonight that Marshall Mauldin's chances to win a berth on the Cracker club depended solely on his ability as an outfielder.

Mauldin was used much last year as a utility man, filling in as an outfielder and also as an infielder. But Marshall's days as an infielder are over. He is strictly a candidate for an outfield post.

No one realized the Atlanta boy's weaknesses as an infielder any more than he did.

Regarded as one of the best defensive centerfielders in the Southern League, Mauldin has a tough fight on his hands.

Jack Suydam, leftfield candidate, and Willard Marshall, centerfield hopeful, have been hitting the ball hard in camp. Mailho has the rightfield post sewed up.

Mauldin has been sold short before and it may be that he'll be in there when the play begins.

Richards is highly pleased with the way Dudley Parker is batting. Last week in against Baltimore Parker hit both times when called upon. His homer today was a hard hit ball. Tom Drake's arm showed much improvement in today's workouts. He seemed very fast. It was a bad day to give an arm a test, cloudy with some rain.

Unlike many ex-major leaguers in the minors, Tom Hefey is hustling all the time. No further cut in the squad is expected until the Crackers return home, but there is a possibility that Rookies Griffin and Hedrick will be left with Savannah. Whether Mack Stewart has recovered sufficiently from an operation last fall to help the Crackers is a matter of conjecture. Camp breaks up tomorrow night and the club goes to Aiken, S. C. for three games before returning home.

Score 8 Runs Without a Hit

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 24.—(UP)—Some sort of a record was believed to have been set today when Columbus of the American association scored eight runs in the fourth inning of an exhibition baseball game with Rochester before a single hit was made.

Ten successive walks and two wild pitches accounted for the eight runs. Another walk, a triple and a single brought in four more runs for Columbus before the inning ended. Columbus won, 19 to 2.

'Swing Is the Thing,' Cross-Hander States

By AL SHARP.

"You know there's something wrong with my swing," said Bob McCoy, the cross-handed golfer. And he whanged another 250-yard drive down the middle at the Bobby Jones golf course.

"It's not smooth enough," Bob added as he walked off the tee.

Bob really has that swing grooved, too. He can let loose on a drive. His backswing is a bit longer than that of the orthodox player. You can see his hands picking up speed to put punch in the clubhead. It doesn't seem to throw him off, either. Bob doesn't have to worry much about keeping that left arm straight. It's almost automatic the way he swings.

So we came to the 18th hole after many visits to the thickets. "You know," said Bob, "I think I'll do something this year I've never done before. I'm going to take some lessons."

Can you imagine that? Bob McCoy, the cross-handed golfer who was good enough to make the Atlanta Public Links team last summer, wants to take lessons.

Just who do you think could give you lessons, Bob?

Hey, boy, bring us that cross-handed driver.

Let's take a lesson from the cross-handed champion of golf.

EMIL LOCHBAUM GIVES TWO HITS IN FIVE INNINGS

Rookie Marshall Drives in Seven Runs With Single, Double, Homer.

By TOM MCRAE.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 24.—The Easter parade was followed in the afternoon by a hit parade.

The Crackers pounded out 22 hits, four of which were homers by Paul Richards, Alf Anderson, Willard Marshall and Dudley Parker as they slaughtered the Savannah Indians, 18-9, in an exhibition game this afternoon.

Hero in the onslaught was Marshall, who drove in six runs with a single and double besides his homer. Shaving honors with him was Emil Lochbaum, former L. S. U. star, who allowed the Indians only two hits and one unearned run in the five innings he worked.

Charlie Burgess followed Lochbaum but the game had reached such a comic stage it was not easy to tell the effectiveness of the Decatur boy. This was the latter's first appearance, due to a sore arm.

By the ninth Marshall Mauldin was pitching and Coach Guy Green was playing first. Green got a hit in his only appearance at bat. Mauldin was mildly shell-shocked, giving up four runs.

TWO IN FIRST.

Atlanta got two in the first. Hefey singled and went to second in Rose's error. Burge and Suydam walked, filling the bases. Marshall's single scored Hefey and Burge.

Richards opened the second with a homer into the left-field stands. Anderson's home run in the fourth gave the Crackers another run.

Farrar was safe on Anderson's error, and went to third on Rose's single. Farrar scored on an infield out.

Atlanta got two more in the fifth. Suydam tripled and scored on Marshall's double. Marshall went to third on a wild pitch, and scored on Richards' long fly.

Atlanta lost the game in the sixth with a seven-run cluster, featuring homers by Marshall and Parker.

The Crackers used 19 players and the Indians 17.

Richards plans to use Larry Miller and Onnie Robinson tomorrow in an effort to make it three out of four over the Indians. Tomorrow's game will close the exhibition series between the two clubs.

JACKET NETMEN PLAY DAVIDSON

Tech's tennis team opens the season this afternoon against Davidson College. The match is scheduled to start at 3 o'clock at the Tech courts.

Russell Bobbitt heads the Jacket lineup. Other players on the squad are Will Johnson, Charles Lindsay—who, by the way, is the last of this family of famed tennis brothers—Roy McCraw, George Graham, G. Vambuskirk and C. Garland.

The next match for the Jackets will be against the strong Presbyterian squad on April 1. Presbyterian holds 9-0 victories over Emory and Florida already.

The complete Tech schedule follows:

March 25, Davidson here.
April 1, Presbyterian here.
April 3, L. S. U. here.
April 5, Alabama in Tuscaloosa.
April 13, Florida here.
April 20, Alabama here.
April 26, Vanderbilt in Nashville.
April 27, Kentucky in Lexington.
May 4, Georgia in Athens.
May 9, 10, 11, tournament in Sewanee.

LIFETIME KOOL-VENT METAL AWNINGS NOW AVAILABLE

METAL AWNINGS INC. CONTROLS PATENTS IN FOUR STATES

Quality Products Prove Popular With Home Owners.

The Lifetime Kool-Vent metal awning is fast becoming a familiar sight in Atlanta and the rest of Georgia. Numerous installations have been made and, without exception, each has been responsible for additional sales to friends or neighbors of the purchasers.

T. G. Young, from Kool-Vent. These awnings do not tear or sag; because of indirect filtration of light, they do not darken your windows. Your present wind-storm and fire insurance automatically covers these awnings. From these eight-degree cooler metal awnings, you receive a lifetime of durable and graceful service.

It is interesting to note the various uses to which metal awnings have been put. They cover windows, terraces, porches, stoops, store fronts, and canopies. They are used for hotels, apartments, private residences and business houses.

Lifetime Kool-Vent metal awnings are available all over the United States. The following cities in the Georgia area have manufacturing and sales facilities: Augusta, Griffin, Macon, Atlanta, and Albany. These distributors cover their own and surrounding counties. Any inquiries concerning their names and locations will be given prompt attention by Metal Awnings, Inc., of Atlanta.

Metal Awnings, Inc., also operates a complete neon and interior fluorescent lighting plant in connection with Lifetime Kool-Vent metal awnings. The quality of workmanship and materials in this plant has been known for the past ten years. In order to give the customer the best that is available, this company uses exclusively Armo Paint-Grip metal for signs and awnings. A pre-treatment given before fabrication and enameling, which is equivalent to two years' actual outside use, insures the finest completed work.

Metal Awnings, Inc., is frank to admit that persons who rent homes are not prospects for them, since almost any kind of awning will last at least a year. The people really interested in Lifetime Kool-Vents are homeowners and merchants with leases of three years or more. The cost of Lifetime Kool-Vents can, in this manner, bring an excellent return on the investment because of their wearing qualities.

The officers of Metal Awnings, Inc., include T. Gordon Young, president; W. H. Skeels Jr., vice president, and W. H. Wynne Jr., secretary-treasurer. Mr. Young states that their plant is equipped with the very latest sheet metal equipment and electrical spot welders and assures you of the finest quality workmanship when you are ready to enhance the beauty of your home or place of business with a Lifetime Kool-Vent metal awning.

Lyle & Gaston Serving 604 Dealers Scattered Over Southeast.

One of the finest examples of the success and growth that can come to a business through rendering a useful and courteous service, is shown in the business career of Lyle & Gaston, photo finishers, located at 227 1-2 Pryor street, S. W.

This concern was established in March, 1922, and in its beginning consisted of only three customers or dealers. Today Lyle & Gaston are known all over the south. They have 604 dealers scattered over the southeast, with 149 of these dealers in Greater Atlanta, and are being serviced daily by the photo finishers. Lyle & Gaston were the first to inaugurate the daily pick-up and delivery service to the neighborhood drug stores.

At the time Lyle & Gaston were established their plant, like most all other plants, was small, and the equipment consisted mostly of home-made outfits, and the laboratory covered a space of only 600 square feet. Today the equipment is the finest that can be had anywhere, some of which was imported for their particular use; the laboratory covers the entire second floor of their own building, built under expert supervision for this particular use. On the first floor one will find all of the latest supplies for the professional and amateur photographers, including all types still and movie cameras, film, papers, chemicals, special indoor lighting equipment, and many other items too numerous to mention.

What Would an X-RAY of Your House Reveal?

Behind your walls, under your floors, costly damage may be going on—without you knowing it. An astonishing percentage of structures in this section is being attacked by termites. These tiny wood-eating insects enter a building from the ground, and remain hidden inside the wood while they carry on their destructive work. They leave no outward evidence of the damage they are doing, and property owners seldom suspect the presence of termites until costly repairs become necessary.

Why not find out if your property is termite-infested? Phone us and a trained Terminix representative will inspect it—without cost or obligation. This is a free service offered by Terminix—the world's largest termite control organization.

QUICK ACTION BY SERVICE CAR

Nelms-Brown, Lakewood Heights, Install Special Car for Service.

Service with a big "S" is the kind now being rendered by the Nelms-Brown Company, on Jonesboro road at Lakewood Heights. This enterprising firm, with its service station and complete line of Firestone accessories, and with its facilities for rendering quick lubrication or other needed things for the auto, has gone a step farther to give speeded service to its patrons.

The Lakewood Heights firm has recently installed a service car. You can see one of the hurry-up boys on it in the illustration herewith. This service car has been installed so that anyone of the employees or firm, on a hurried call, can rush out to the patron's home, bring the automobile, and with its facilities for rendering quick lubrication or other needed things for the auto, has gone a step farther to give speeded service to its patrons.

Service at Buick Now in Charge Of Bob Bates

Motorists who are owners and drivers of Buick cars—in fact, of any other make of car—will be pleased with the information that R. D. (Bob) Bates is now again in active charge of the big service department of Southern Buick, Inc., at the corner of Spring and Harris streets.

Bob was placed in charge of this department a year or so ago, but because of his intimate training and knowledge of Buick cars, an emergency arose where J. W. Lambert, president of the automobile company, had to shift him to another important department. That emergency has now passed, and Bates is back to his "first love."

Another feature that will be pleasing to patrons is the fact that Bates has set up an exchange for any needed motor tuning up. Motors, carburetors, fuel pumps, starters, generators, regulators—any item that needs work—can be quickly exchanged. This means that when you drive in for this

MODERN, SIMPLE, IS 'GLIDER FILE'

So effortless in operation that it resembles the smooth flow of a glider in flight has earned the name "Glider File" for the new line of steel filing cabinets now available at the John H. Harland Company. Only recently perfected by Browne-Morse, these files offer innovations that make them a time-saving addition to any office.

Following the modern trend, it is readily seen that simplicity of construction is the keynote of the entire line that embraces a style and size cabinet to solve most any filing problem. A positive locking system, as well as construction features, that will not allow a drawer to be pulled entirely out unintentionally, are offered. However, to remove a drawer when necessary is only a "one-girl" job.

There's no "sending back to the factory" with the Glider File. A clerk with simple tools can make necessary additions and even change the size of the filing space by utilizing the recently introduced insertable drawer feature. The strength of its ball bearing construction was proved by 376,000 pull and push operations on a testing machine with 80-pound load. No appreciable wear resulted. The baked enamel finish makes it definitely ornamental in appearance.

The Glider File is only one of the many modern and helpful office aids that are always to be had at the John H. Harland Company's retail store at 8 Pryor street, S. W. With Jesse Mallory, Heyward Myers and Bob Castle as floor salesmen and a full staff of well-trained outside men, a call to Walnut 5738 will bring you friendly and expert attention to your problems.

The John H. Harland Company was founded in 1923 by John H. Harland and P. Rufus Brown. In addition to the retail store the company also maintains a well-equipped printing and lithographing plant at 249 Jackson street.

type of work, you don't have to wait until the job can be completed—undisturbed of the use of your car for perhaps several hours, in some cases—but there is an exchange of these parts, slipped right into your car within a few minutes, and you drive away happy.

Bates has been with Buick for four years. In years past he has been connected with other lines, and has attended factory schools for Ford and Buick at Baltimore, Memphis, Jacksonville, Charlotte and many other cities. He knows automobiles from the front bumper, including what's under the hood to the tail license tag.

U. S. Ships Call at Marseille Under Neutrality Technicality

French Port, While Not Proscribed, Belongs to a Belligerent.

NEW YORK, March 24.—(P)—The American Export and the American President steamship lines, it was disclosed yesterday, have for five months permitted their ships to call at the port of Marseille, France, under a technicality of the American neutrality law.

Spokesmen for the lines said the directors believed the service had been legal, although it was understood State Department officials in Washington are now studying the question of whether an American-flag vessel can legally enter a belligerent port.

Persons discussing the technicalities pointed out that the neutrality law prohibited an American vessel from entering a zone of combat defined by the President, and also from carrying passengers and cargo into belligerent ports.

The law, however, did not deal with the carrying of passengers or cargo out of a belligerent port. Marseille, on the Mediterranean, was not included in the combat zone proclaimed by President Roosevelt, but under the law is a belligerent port.

The American ships, it was disclosed, have taken cargo and passengers out of the French port but not into it. They have called there on their way home from the Far East or from the Levant.

Company officials said they had not been instructed by Washington to omit the French port. The American President lines announced, however, that its home-bound vessel, the President Garfield, would omit the port.

Brown Shirts Dislike for Reds May Give Key To Blast-White

(This is the seventh of several articles by W. L. White, written from extensive notes made inside Germany and brought to Copenhagen for preparation to avoid Nazi censorship.)

By WILLIAM L. WHITE, Special Correspondent.

COPENHAGEN (By Mail).—The day I arrived in Berlin I had my first glimpse of the brown shirts. I did not know then that it would also be my last really good look at them. It was the climax of the "Winter-Help" campaign, a national tag day through which the Nazis raise some money which goes to help the poor through the cold season and also builds good will for the movement by advertising the "humanitarian aims of the party."

It was Sunday and the brown shirts had built a swastika-draped platform in the middle of Unter den Linden. They had speakers and a sound truck, and brown-uniformed storm troopers thronged the sidewalks jingling big cups under the noses of the passersby to shake them down for the fund.

"Tough Eggs." It was obviously their day to howl; I did not then realize that during the entire year they now have only one other—the Munich Beer Hall reunion. I studied the faces of the brown-shirted troopers carefully. They were obviously very simple men—the natural raw material for sincere slogan-shouting. Their uniforms were shabby, and because of their color they reminded me of the last bedraggled rag-tag and bobtail of an American bonus army.

When you give them clubs and slogans and send them out into the streets to use them both on the Communists, they can do a workmanlike job. But if you presently take away the clubs and change the old slogans (both having outlived their usefulness), you are going to have trouble, particularly if you can't deliver to these simple skull-crackers enough jobs for all. Particularly if they know that, sitting in the best tables of the Adlon and Bristol hotels, are all the parties' smoothies and big shots, lunching with paunchy industrialists and visiting firemen and lunching very well indeed, even if it is all legal.

But the final straw to them was the Russian alliance.

That made a mockery of the only thing they had left—pride in their heroism when they traded punches with the Communists in defense of Adolf Hitler in the very early days of the movement, when everybody was tough; before the smoothies got aboard.

Theories Rampant. So when, last November, that explosion occurred in the Munich beer hall just 20 minutes after Adolf Hitler had left, following his talk to his old street-fighting comrades, it produced more theories among American correspondents than there were fragments to the bomb.

But despite later arrests and even alleged confessions, the theory that cannot be proved, that certainly will never be printed inside Germany, and the one that is hardest to laugh off, is the one that makes the most sense.

Revolt within the party itself on the part of some of the old comrades, the old brown shirt street fighters whose chief virtue had been an ability to knock the block off Communists, real or fancied, in a gang brawl; the old street fighters who were suddenly confronted with a treaty making allies out of these Communists.

BARUCH SUPPORTS HOSPITAL MEASURE

Wagner-George Bill Fills Need of Southern Areas, He Says.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(P)—Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, made public today a letter from Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, endorsing the Wagner-George bill to appropriate $10,000,000 for construction of hospitals in rural and economically depressed areas.

Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, is co-author of the bill. "Owing to my close relations with southern rural communities, I know the real need for small hospitals," Baruch said. "Even with the desire for economy, I advise most strongly this expenditure."

He recalled his boyhood in South Carolina as the son of a country doctor and said he had gained an appreciation then of the good the few rural hospitals of that time accomplished.

CZECH IS HUNTED IN SLAYING OF NAZIS

PRAGUE, March 24.—(AP)—Two German border guards were shot and killed yesterday near the south Bohemian town of Bresi, allegedly by a Czech student, an official announcement said today.

Police of the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia are hard on the trail of the student, the announcement said. An agent of the Gestapo, the German secret police, was wounded in a shooting scrape while trying to close in on the suspect.

DR. FREDERICK SCHEUCH.

SIGMA CHI LEADER WILL ARRIVE TODAY

Dr. Frederick Scheuch To Visit Tech, Emory and Georgia Chapters.

Dr. Frederick Scheuch, thirtieth grand consul of Sigma Chi fraternity, will arrive in Atlanta this afternoon to visit Sigma Chi chapters at Tech, Emory and the University of Georgia.

An 1898 graduate of Purdue University, Dr. Scheuch is a former classmate of the American author, Booth Tarkington.

Following his graduation, he became a teacher of modern European languages and engineering drawing at the University of Montana. He remained there for nearly a half-century, serving as temporary president on five occasions.

He retired in 1936, and shortly afterwards was named president emeritus.

Dr. Scheuch will be honor guest at a reception given by the Atlanta alumni chapter of Sigma Chi at 8 o'clock tonight at the Henry Grady hotel.

WAR ENGINES STILL FOR EASTER RITES

to read the "Salutation to the Sunrise" under the blue-white glare of movie arcs. Then Kenny Baker sang "Ava Maria," and Carrie Jacobs Bond played the music to her anthem, "Behold the Sun."

(The proceedings were broadcast for the first time by television. When at last the stadium was empty of everything but the lilies and an electric organ, the sun began to shine brightly.)

(At Forest Lawn, one of the city's leading cemeteries, William Farnum and Helen Jepson led similar services, while at Long Beach and San Diego other hillside found other throngs at Easter celebrations. Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck drove to Riverside, 40 miles inland, for services at Mount Rubidoux, where the sun actually shone on schedule.

(In Hollywood itself there was no actual Easter parade, largely because the population never walks anywhere if it can help it.)

F. D. Stays Home.
In Washington, President Roosevelt, suffering a cold, stayed at home on his physician's advice. Mrs. Roosevelt laid a cross of lilies on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier during a sunrise ceremony at Arlington (Va.) cemetery.

The capital was host to thousands of Easter sightseers. The

Not to be outdone by milady, Mother Nature staged her own Easter parade in north Georgia, dressing that region in an Easter bonnet of snow. This picture was made near Demorest, Ga. (Story on Page 1).

President, unless the weather improved, might be unable to greet children and parents at the egg rolling on the White House lawn today.

Chill winds in New York City, however, did not keep the minions of machinery from strutting their new finery down breezy Fifth avenue, where many a mink-coated matron braved the snifflers for the tribute of a sister's envy.

The avenue and its famous churches were crowded from dawn until dusk. If snowballs had been handy, you could have stood at 57th street and knocked off tophats until your arms gave out.

Noted among the paraders and worshippers were Katharine Hepburn, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Postmaster General James A. Farley and former Governor Alfred E. Smith, who forsook his shiny brown derby for a shining silk hat.

Services in a Catholic and a Protestant church were televised today, the first religious services ever transmitted over television.

In Lake Placid the telecast reached the top of Whiteface mountain, third highest peak in the Adirondacks, where three weather observers, snowbound since January, "went to church" by television.

In Winston-Salem, N. C., an estimated crowd of 35,000—slightly smaller than in recent years—braved Christmas weather to attend the traditional Easter sunrise service at Home Moravian church. By 8:30 o'clock it was snowing. The snow lasted throughout the day.

$200,000 FLAMES

SWEET IOWA TOWN

OTTUMWA, Iowa, March 24.—(AP)—Twenty-six business establishments were temporarily forced out of business early today when fire swept through a four-story building here, causing damage estimated at $200,000.

The blaze broke out in the basement about 8 o'clock this morning and swept to the roof through the elevator shaft. It was 11 a. m. before Ottumwa, Oskaloosa and Fairfield fire departments could bring the flames under control.

Hardest hit was the Hofmann Drug Co., occupying the main floor. The loss there was estimated at $50,000. Upper floors were occupied by physicians, dentists and insurance men.

BENNING SOLDIERS HOLD EASTER RITES

Army Men Worship at Dawn in Setting of Peace.

(Picture on Page 18.)

FORT BENNING, Ga., March 24. (AP)—Army men: trained for warfare worshipped in a setting of peace at dawn Easter services of the United States infantry school today.

More than 8,000 soldiers and civilians gathered in the post's Horse Shoe bowl, a natural amphitheater, for the seasonal religious exercises instituted by Brigadier General Asa L. Singleton in 1937 upon his assumption of the school command.

Motor cars with lights ablaze streamed to the reservation from the highways for an hour before the scheduled start of the program with the rising sun at 5:40 o'clock. Winter wraps were more in evidence than spring finery among the feminine visitors, and soldiers wore olive drab overcoats to ward off a chilly fog.

Troops from the first division's tent camp who wished to attend were transported to the post proper by a train on the reservation's 24-mile narrow-gauge line.

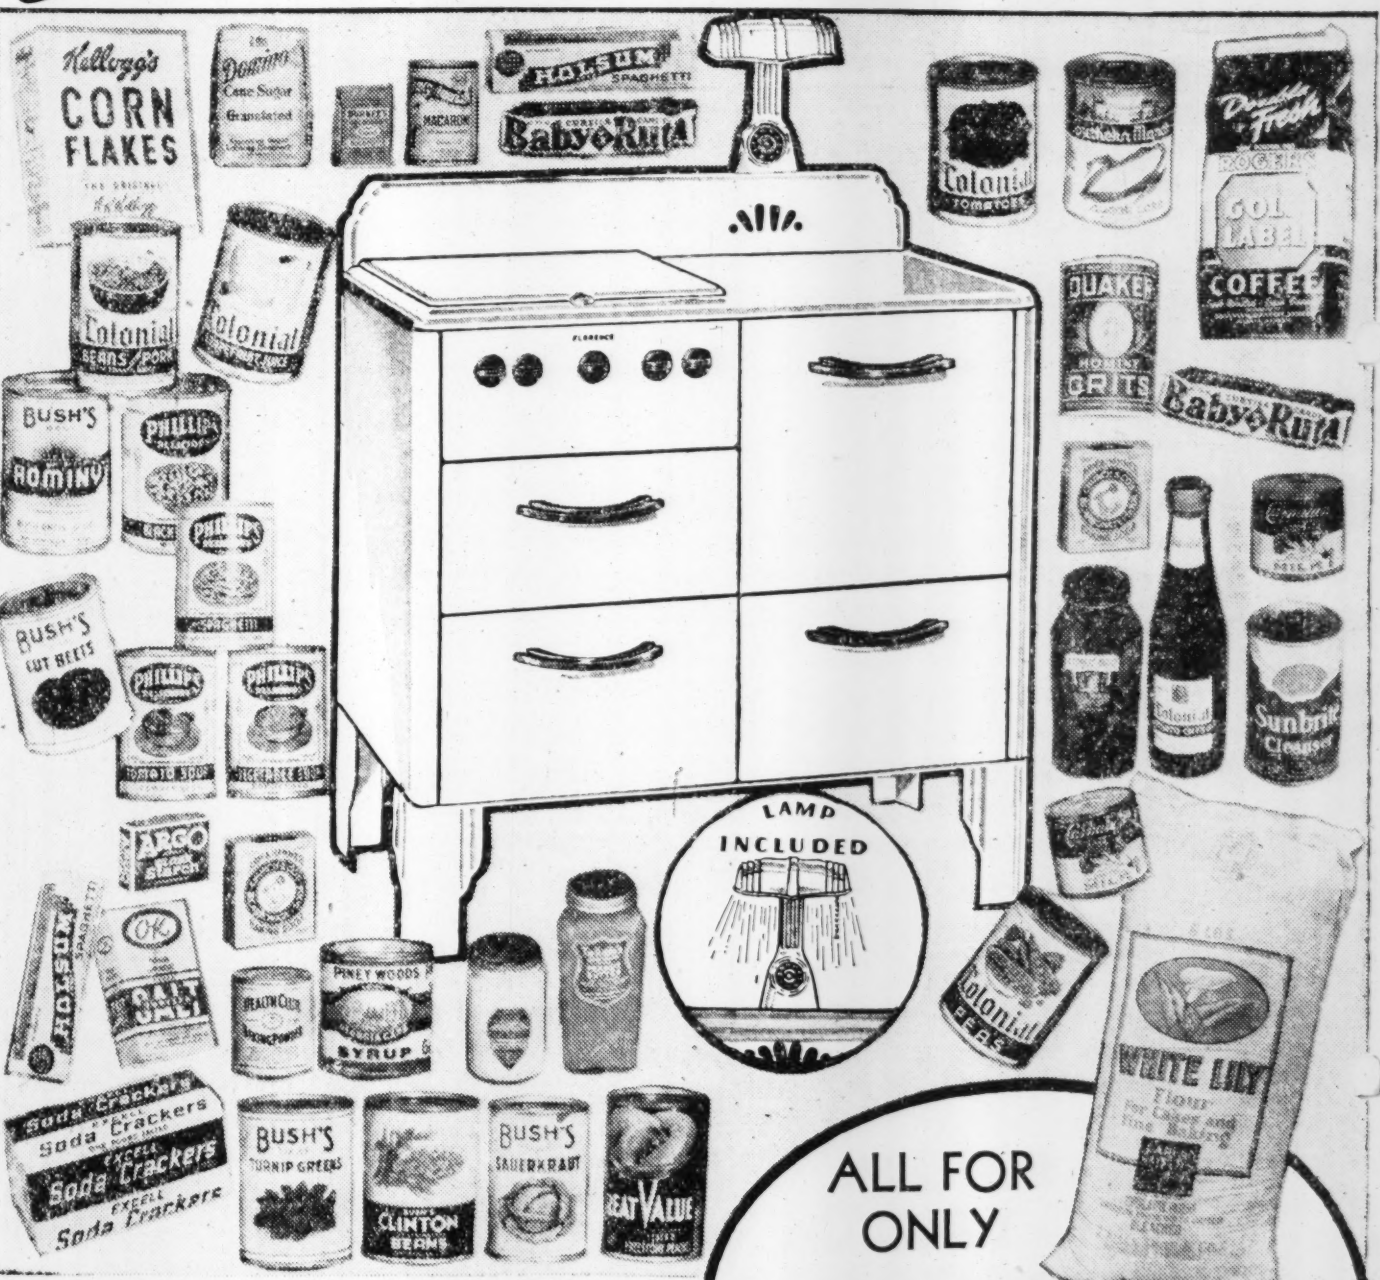

A living cross was formed by 1,200 soldiers seated on benches in the arena. The post's chapel choir, a platoon of buglers and guidon, three military bands and Negro singers of the 24th Infantry combined in effective musical presentations.

Only momentarily did the sun break through the early morning clouds. It appeared about 6:15 o'clock, then was concealed again by the gray blanket.

Participants and visitors received coffee and doughnuts without charge from army cooks at the close of the service.

Doctor Lauds The Modern Treatment

By Dr. William Brady.

I quote from a letter written January 6, 1940, by a reader who is one of the thousands of patients who have been cured of hernia by the ambulant or injection method:

"The first thing my doctor advised was to write you, which I did, and you recommended Dr. Brady."

"I cannot speak too highly of him. Before hearing from you I had gone into the matter pretty thoroughly and had a hard time trying to decide whether to undergo the regular operation or take a chance with ambulant treatment. Objections to the injection method as impressed upon me by the various physicians I consulted were as follows:

"1. Danger of peritonitis.

"2. Results not lasting—it is not a cure.

"3. Statistics from treatment of large groups (such as insured employees) prove that better results are obtained by the radical operation.

"4. Filling a hole with scar tissue is not anatomically correct.

"5. There have been some serious results from the injection method of treatment. (Asked to specify what results, this doctor said that sometimes the operator had pierced the intestines with the injection needle.)

Manifestly the objections raised by the published practitioners are hypothetical—not their own hypotheses, perhaps, but those conjured up by the great thinker for the organized medical profession of Yankeland. You know, the Pooch-Bah and his clique of omniscient boys who run the A. M. A.

Every one of the objections raised against the modern method of treating hernia (rupture, breach) applies, with insignificant modifications, to the radical operation. So far as danger is concerned, the patient must take far greater risks if he undergoes operation than are involved in ambulant treatment. So far as results are concerned, the prospect of a cure is fully as good with ambulant treatment as it is with herniotomy. In every instance, of course, I refer to treatment by a physician skilled in the method—be it radical operation or ambulant treatment. Incidentally, I warn readers to beware of charlatans who canvass the public for customers for any kind of treatment. The old rule is still good—if a doctor is honest and competent his satisfied patients see to it that he is kept busy.

Finally, and without fear of contradiction from any source, I believe that any doctor who attempts to frighten hernia patients with such hypothetical objections to modern treatment as those above quoted is either ignorant or dishonest, and unworthy of confidence in either case.

Tennis Frock

By Barbara Bell.

You'll need plenty of play clothes this summer—even if you aren't voyaging to tropic climes this season. And Universal's Anne Gwynne here shows you a tennis frock, with shorts to match, that's really indispensable for coming good times outdoors. A few snips of your shears, a brief run on the sewing machine, and you'll have it all made, in double-quick time, and you'll be delighted with the way it looks, fits and feels.

The dart-fitted waistline and full skirt are both well designed for action, and the shorts are exceptionally well cut.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1915 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires 4 2-3 yards of 36-inch material for the dress and shorts, without nap.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1915 can be procured for 15 cents. Please remit in coins, giving your name, address, pattern number and size. Mail your orders to Barbara Bell Pattern Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

MY DAY: Flowers Dispel Worries at Home

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON—When I walked into my sitting room in the White House at 1:30 today, a huge vase of daffodils greeted me and I felt my spirit, which had been somewhat low, rise like a rocket. My low spirits were the result of a very high wind which delayed us in our flight down to Washington and gave us pretty rough weather which finally forced us to land at Bolling Field. This meant that the cars at the regular airport had to drive over. The wind almost blew us off the ground when we stepped out of the plane, so we all went back into it and waited.

I nervously wondered if Miss Thompson would find my guests, who were already sitting in the White House. On arrival I found them still sitting unfazed! I hustled Miss Thompson down and poor Mrs. Holm greeted me with the news that she was suffering from sinus. Then I looked in on my husband, who said that he had told the press yesterday that he had swamp fever, but today he decided it was jungle fever. However, he looked really better and Mr. Frank Walker, who was with him, looked cheerful too, so that raised my spirits one point and the yellow daffodils did the rest.

I enjoyed yesterday's lunch with the foreign correspondents very much. Both of my neighbors of the British and French press were charming, and more than kind. I like questions so much better than standing up and lecturing people who can't answer back.

Before I attended the luncheon I had a rather pathetic experience. The poor little couple who run Aunt Martha's lunch box service, felt I had harmed their business and asked to be allowed to tell me their side of the controversy with the lunch box boys. Mrs. Corbott was voluble. Mr. Corbott was silent, but it was quite evident that they needed a mediator with plenty of time to verify the statements made by all sides, to look over their business and give them sound advice and a little courage. He must see too, that the boys get a fair break, so they will have enough interest really to build up the business. I left them feeling sorry for everyone concerned and read with relief in this morning's papers that the head of the mediation board has heard this little struggle and successfully concluded it.

After lunch I talked for a few minutes with Dr. Rudolph Kagey and am deeply interested in his plans for a new type of educational exhibition at the New York World's Fair this spring. Then I went home to meet some friends, and, last but not least, to spend an hour with my own boys.

A Magnetic Personality Is a Gift

By Caroline Chatfield.

A lot of college boys and girls write to this department asking for tips on growing magnetic personalities. They want to be popular. They want social success. They want to be ready to enter the world of business, wearing the shining armor. Every time I read one of these letters I think of a pretty young business girl who took a course in personality building. It ruined her.

No matter who said what, she was ready with the too-sweet smile and the yes, yes. She couldn't wait for you to finish a sentence, so anxious was she to agree with you. Every bit of her girlish natural charm was dissolved in the burning desire to impress people with her pleasing personality. Alas artificiality is never pleasing. And she missed.

The magnetic personality that everybody wants and few have is a gift of the gods and those that didn't draw it at birth needn't waste their time trying to acquire what can't be acquired. They had better get on to the business of improving their looks, their minds, their manners and building character.

Of course it would be gratifying to be touted as a natural charmer. It's at sort of boost to the vanity would give anybody self-confidence, put an end to timidity, remove inhibitions and make one feel he had the world in a sling. So he would have fun, entertainment were the only thing at stake. But for the long pull of working, living wonder if there aren't other things that stand us in better stead than magnetic personality? Sincerity for instance, kindness, an educated heart as well as an educated mind and the gentle manners that come along naturally as a result.

Surely. How do we rate our friends and dear ones? Not by their magnetism but by their sympathy and understanding, by their generosity and loyalty, by their dependability—and incidentally, by the way they rate us.

If any one of the personality-friends falls down on us when we need him, stabs us in the back withholds sympathy when we think it should be forthcoming, or fails to give us what we think is due credit, we don't give two hoots for his magnetic qualities.

Same way in business: the personality-plus lad may land the job more quickly than the lad with the plough-horse approach. But when he gets his feet under the desk, the boss rates him by his concentration on his job, his stick-to-it attitude, his ability to think up new ways of doing old tasks and also by his loyalty to the business.

Same way all through life: maybe we can't go through as trailing clouds of glory without the electric qualities that light us up and draw people to us as the madda draws the moths. But we can light up our little corner and warm it too with sincerity and kindness and courtesy and unselfishness.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Ann Sothorn, Cast Again in Moll Role, Says She Could Play No Other Part

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, March 24.—"I'm falling madly apart," moans Ann Sothorn on the "Brother Orchid" set. "I've reached a new kind of low." In everyday language, Ann is tired. And she doesn't get any brighter when Director Lloyd Bacon shouts, "Action, full of pep now." The scene is where she tries to get Brother Orchid—Edward G. Robinson—to marry her. First Ann blows her lines; then Mr. Robinson. They both get the giggles and are given time out to recover.

Miss Sothorn is attired in the usual film regalia for the girl whose heart is of gold, but whose morals are slightly questionable—i. e., a low-necked, short-skirted dress, many frills and flounces. "I'm playing another moll," she tells me. "I wouldn't know how to play a lady now. I'd talk out of the side of my mouth for sure." The makeup man repowders one side of her face. "Where's where the giggle came from," she exploded. "It was a goosy sort of kiss."

For a long time now, I've wondered about those screen kisses. Do movie actresses enjoy them, or what? Here is my chance to find out. I put the question to Miss Sothorn. "Sure, I enjoy them," she replies. "In fact, I just can't get enough!" At this interesting point, Ann is called to the camera. Too bad. I was on the verge of great discoveries.

Before I leave this set, Robinson, who plays a reformed gangster, tells me, "When I was at the White House, Franklin Roosevelt Jr. told me that his father would run for a third term only if he thought that Hitler would win the war." This information may provide a clue to pro and anti-third-term-ites.

THESE WOMEN! -- By d'Alessio

"Here! You might as well wear them literally."

It Isn't How Much You Eat, It's How Many Calories

By Ida Jean Kain.

It takes all kinds of complaints to keep a columnist on her toes—but some of them set her back on her heels! Especially those that run like this: "I couldn't possibly reduce on the amount of food included in the menus. I have gained weight steadily on much less food than you specify for reducing."

Maybe so... not on as few calories, though! And when all is said and done, it isn't how much you eat; it's how many calories! You will lose weight on these menus, and as long as you can do that, why object?

Calorie juggling is the trick that makes it possible for you to eat and diet at the same time. The cut is made in the foods you do not need—and the biggest cut is made in fats. Arithmetic proves the deletion of fats takes the most calories out of the menu and leaves more of the important foods in. This element contains more than two and one-fourth times as many calories as either protein or carbohydrates. And, furthermore, science has found that body fat is more readily formed from fats than from the other two elements.

For example, let's see what can be done with a glass of milk. You must have milk in your diet, but not whole milk—which contains the fat. By skimming the milk or taking buttermilk, you can have two glasses for the same number of calories supplied in one glass of whole milk. True, skimming the milk removes the vitamin A, but this is replaced by the use of a vitamin capsule, which adds no calories whatever to the diet. Vitamin capsules are an excellent means of promoting bodily resistance while reducing weight. Use either haliver oil or cod liver oil in capsule form. One a day is enough and does not make the price exorbitant.

Salad dressings of all kinds are a big item when reducing. Olive oil contains 100 calories per tablespoonful. Mayonnaise dressing counts 100 calories per level tablespoonful, or 250 calories per one-fourth cup. That's the reason chicken and potato salads are usually considered fattening. French dressing averages 100 calories per one and one-half tablespoonful—and that makes it easy to turn a crisp green salad into a dish that's high in calories.

The way out is to take salad minus the dressing or to use some kind of substitute. Some of the complaints, however, have had to do with the vinegar and seasoning so often suggested in place of regular dressing! So I have been experimenting to hit on some new recipes that are both delicious and low in calories. I believe that the results will make it very much easier for you to cut out the fats in your diet. Clip and save these:

Delicious French Dressing.

One-half cup sugar, 3-4 cup water. Make a simple syrup and cook very slowly, stirring constantly, until sugar dissolves, or about 15 minutes. Remove from fire, add juice of one lemon, and return to fire and let come to boiling point—just once. Remove from fire and chill. Then add the following ingredients:

1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce 1-2 cup mineral oil
3 tsp. capsup 1-2 tsp. salt—less if desired.
3 tsp. vinegar or lemon juice Beat with rotary egg beater.
1-2 tsp. onion juice Yield: 1 1-2 cups, 420 calories; 1
1-2 tsp. paprika tbs., 16 calories.

Boiled Salad Dressing.

1 tsp. salt 2 eggs yolks
1-4 to 1-2 tsp. dry mustard 1-2 tsp. melted butter
1-1-2 tsp. flour 3-4 cup skim milk
1-1-2 tsp. sugar 1-4 cup vinegar or lemon juice

Mix dry ingredients together. Beat egg yolks and add. Then very slowly beat in the butter, milk and vinegar, and cook in double boiler until thickened. Yield: 1 1-2 cups, 415 calories; 1 tsp., 25 calories.

ANN SOTHERN.

Freddie Bartholomew is being expelled from Rugby in "Tom Brown's School Days." "What for?" I ask him as we listen on the side-line to Headmaster Sir Cedric Hardwicke go through with "My painful duty, etc." "Don't know," replies Freddie between bites on a huge candy bar. "I haven't read the script."

Aunt Cissie is on the set as usual, and as usual, is more than willing to talk about her wonderful boy, who is now eight inches taller than his guardian-aunt. They

Give the Baby A Soft Pink Hand-Woven Afghan

How cozy that precious baby will sleep beneath this pretty hand-woven afghan! Of pink yarn embroidered in white and blue yarn flowers—it's a joy to look at and fun to make.

You need only a simple adjustable loom costing about 25 cents, a tapestry needle and four-ply Germantown yarn.

The afghan is made of nine pieces—each 11 by 13 inches—and you weave them one at a time this easy way. Adjust your loom to a 13-inch square and, for your warp, tie end of pink yarn to loom at upper left-hand corner.

Then carry yarn back and forth across the loom, winding around the wooden teeth till you have 39 warp threads. Repeat till you have two threads through each groove.

Now, to weave, thread needle with yarn, tie one end to loom 2 1-2 inches from lower right corner. Go over and under warp threads in a simple basket weave. When all pieces are finished, join groups of three along the 11-inch sides—crocheting them together. You now have three long strips which you whip together with pink yarn. Bind outer edges with pink satin ribbon.

On this same loom you can make a handsome "tweed-weave" pillow. Or you can weave a colorful rug on a hoop or a smart purse on a cardboard "loom."

Our 40-page booklet, Beautiful and Useful Articles You Can Easily Weave, has complete directions for weaving dozens of articles for home and personal use—on cardboard hoops, breadboards, other simple and inexpensive looms. Articles include scarves, belts, doilies, coasters, lampshades—all attractive, easy to make.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, BEAUTIFUL AND USEFUL ARTICLES YOU CAN EASILY WEAVE, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Jacket-Ensemble

By Lillian Mae.

4377

Belle of your spring-into-summer wardrobe will be this jacket-ensemble that knows its way round the clock. Lillian Mae has designed Pattern 4377 with special attention to slenderizing features. Tail-and-slim hip lines are given by those three front skirt panels. The softly cut bodice is held smooth by darts above the waist and at the shoulders. Suit yourself as to neckline: use a smart collar or have a graceful V-shape. Make short three-quarter sleeves; add lace edging on either buttons or a bow for feminine touches. The straight-hanging jacket, in matching or contrasting color, gives marvelous figure-flattery.

Pattern 4377 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36, dress, takes 3 3-4 yards 39-inch fabric. Send 15 cents in coins for this pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

Are you a "problem child" as far as your figure is concerned? If you are irregularly proportioned let Lillian Mae's perfect foundation pattern 4114 take the guess-work out of dressmaking. It's a "basic figure" pattern that is first fitted and adjusted to your exact measurements in tissue then cut out in muslin for a permanent record. Pin all of your dress patterns to it, make the necessary changes, and the finished frock will fit with custom-made perfection! Send for a foundation pattern today—it costs just 15c.

Send your order to Lillian Mae, Pattern Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Johnson Plans Supper Preceding Sea Island Ball

• • • QUITE the most important and elaborate event of the spring holidays at fashionable Sea Island Beach will be the costume Embassy Ball, which is scheduled for Wednesday evening. Preceding the affair a number of buffet suppers will be given by members of the Atlanta colony at the resort. Among them will be that at which Mrs. Edwin F. Johnson will be hostess at her handsome beach residence. Mrs. Johnson went to Miami last Thursday and will return to Sea Island tomorrow. Her visit to the Florida city was made especially to be present Saturday evening at the party given by former Governor and Mrs. James Cox, of Dayton, Ohio, and at which they announced the engagement of their daughter, Anne, to Mrs. Johnson's son, Louis, the formal announcement having appeared in Sunday's papers.

But back to the Embassy Ball. Engraved invitations have been issued to all the Sea Island residents to attend the event, which will mark the opening of the enlarged Palm Dance patio.

Garlands of colorful roses will festoon the terrace patio and an international array of shields and flags of foreign nations will decorate the walls. Each guest will wear a costume typical of some foreign country and paces, dressed in satin, will announce each arrival. The members of the orchestra will wear red, white and blue attire.

Other interesting features will be a floor show, attractive favors and a supper to be served at midnight.

• • • AMONG attractive visitors spending Easter week here is Mrs. Louis Morrison, of Oakland, Cal., who arrived Friday to visit her mother, Mrs. Frances Griffin Brooks, at her home in the Ponce de Leon apartments.

The former Josephine Willford, of this city, Mrs. Morrison has a legion of friends here who have already begun planning informal parties in her honor. Regrettably Sally reports that the visitor's adorable twin daughters, Gertrude and Frances Morrison, elected to remain in California during their mother's jaunt south.

When Mrs. Morrison leaves next week, she will journey to Baltimore to be the guest of those erstwhile Atlantans, Mr. and Mrs. Holland Judkins, after which she will visit in Wilmington, N. C., with her close friends, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hodgson.

Last, but not least, she will be the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Alfred Thoms, in Washington, D. C., before returning to Oakland.

• • • QUANTITIES of Easter lilies from the British-owned Island of Bermuda added to the beauty and joy of yesterday's celebration at the home of the Griffith School of Music on Bonaventure avenue. The school, you know, is the residence of those talented Atlantans, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Griffith, Mrs. Mary Griffith, Mrs. Walter Bedard, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bedard.

The other member of the family, namely, Beverly Griffith, who is now in Bermuda, sent the traditional flowers of the season by plane from the island, to grace his former home here. Inclosed in cellophane boxes, the flowers arrived in the amazing time of ten hours.

• • • A Dainty handmade baby dress was worn by little Bonnie Lamar Dial yesterday when she was christened at 4 o'clock at the Westminster Presbyterian church. The pastor, Dr. Ferguson Wood, officiated in the presence of a limited number of friends of the baby's parents. The dainty little dress was worn by the baby's sister, Nancy Michael, at her christening and was the gift of Mrs. Howell McGill.

The baby is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lamar Dodd and bears the name of her father and her grandfather, the late Barney Edward Dial. Acting as godmothers for the baby were Mrs. Louise W. Ryke and Mrs. Ben C. Cook, and Gene Dial acted as godfather for his niece. Mrs. Wirtie Lane Greenwood is the baby's maternal grandmother.

Low cost Custard Pie

RECIPE OF THE WEEK TESTED AND APPROVED BY THE MCCORMICK CONSUMER BOARD

2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. salt
3 eggs

1 tsp. McCormick Vanilla
1 tsp. McCormick Baking Powder

Scald milk in double boiler. Place in bowl, sugar, salt, slightly beaten eggs. Add scalded milk, stirring constantly, mix thoroughly, cool, add vanilla. Pour through a wire strainer in unbaked pie shell. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Bake in moderate oven (375° F) about 40 minutes.

NOTE:—Better ingredients mean better results with any recipe. Use McCormick's rich, pure, genuine Vanilla—it's "top" for fine flavoring quality. Ask your grocer for McCormick tea, spices and extracts.

TRAIL'S END

When Prentiss Goes to the Bar He Discovers He's Tricked by Silcott

By William MacLeod Raine.
SYNOPSIS.

As Anne Eliot steps from the stage coach on Blanco's broad Main street, there is a pistol shot. Jim Silcott's hat is whisked from his head, but he recovers it before running lightly to the doorway of an apothecary. Buck Sneve, a Hat T rider, levels his gun again but he drops dead an instant before the door closes behind Silcott. This gun play had followed Sneve's appearance in the Trail's End with his foreman, Jud Prentiss, and three other Hat T riders. Jud dragging with him Jesse Lamorey, Jud had accused Sneve of double-crossing Russell Mosely, his employer, in connection with the Annio land-grant feud. Jesse's younger brother Phil had entered and refused to leave without Jesse and when Jud was about to hit him, Silcott, waiting for a game of poker, asked if Mosely's orders included beating up the boy. Jud warned Jim that he was courting trouble and turned to play his quiet on a Jew in the room. Anne Eliot is the niece of Carl Rogers, editor of the Sentinel, and it was after he was shot from ambush for opposing Mosely in the land-grant feud, that Silcott took over the job. Na Russell, Anne's boarding-house keeper, gets Rufe Jelks to take Anne to the "Sentinel" office. As they walk she tells Rufe that she inherited the "Sentinel" from Rogers, her uncle. Silcott had told her that Rogers had died but when Rufe tells her he was murdered, she says Jim must leave, she can't be responsible for his safety. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

The first man his eyes fell upon was Bar Overstreet, who was sitting in a poker game with his coat off and a pile of chips in front of him. Prentiss strode to the table and flung out a curse at the Tincup Creek rancher.

"You blasted fool," he roared. "Not ten minutes ago I told you I'd settle with you when we met—and here you are."

Overstreet was a giant of a man, with not an ounce of fat on his two hundred and twenty pounds. He looked up at the Hat T foreman, a puzzled alarm in his faded blue-gray eyes.

"What's eatin' you, Jud?" he squeaked, in a tiny voice that always surprised as it came from such a bulk. "I ain't seen you for a week."

"What's the use of lying?" Prentiss snapped. "When you know I talked with you down at the 'Sentinel' office less than a quarter of an hour ago—not more than five minutes since. By thunder, you must have run all the way to get here so quick."

"The Tincup Creek man stared. "Why Jud, I been sitting here playing draw for an hour and a half. Never left my seat. Ask the boys."

"That's right, Jud," a player corroborated. Another said, "He sure has. Hotter than mustard, too. Look at his chips."

Prentiss glared at them and wheeled away abruptly. He had been bluffed out by Silcott, and his anger boiled. He was a vain man, and it stung his self-assurance to sing small. The worst of it was that his riders knew, and they would laugh about it among themselves. Soon the story would spread all over town and to every little ranch in the district.

"It was that Rufe Jelks," said Yeager. "The joke is sure on us. He's the best mimic I ever heard. You know how he sits around campfires taking off the boys so blamed natural you think it was them if you didn't see Rufe sitting there."

"If he thinks he can play monkeyshines with me—" Prentiss stopped, from the sheer inadequacy of language to express his turgid emotions.

The fat bald cowpuncher slid a look of carefully concealed exultation at the foreman. None of the Hat T men liked the overbearing manner of Prentiss; he was a hard, bad-tempered master.

"Yes sir, we'll never hear the end of it," Yeager prophesied. "He raises an ace-full with a pair of deuces, and we lay our hand down. It's going to be tough to take, Jud."

Prentiss glowered at his drink. There was no use going down to the Sentinel office now. Silcott would go home. It would be some slight satisfaction to wreck the place completely, but Mosely would resent that. The Sentinel did not belong to Silcott, but to a young woman, and it would stir up a lot of feeling if they destroyed her property.

Russ was not a man to make enemies wantonly. He would probably be greatly annoyed at what they had already done, for he liked to play his own game and not have the men make any moves without consulting him first.

Though Prentiss felt as vicious as a bear with a sore paw, there was nothing to be done about it now. All he could do was wait for his revenge.

When Anne Eliot was a little girl she had sat before an open fire and listened to the stories of her uncle, Carl Rogers, back to Ohio on a visit. Her imagination had quickened his stories, and in the coils she had seen the whole pageant of the winning of the west. The Indian and the buffalo, the trapper, the pioneer in his covered wagon, the long dusty cattle trails—they marched before her in panorama.

As she grew up the vision must have lingered in the background of her mind. She liked the quiet life of Massillon, but there were hours when she found it too well kept and trim. The older people were too well satisfied, the young men too conventional.

Because she was attractive and well connected, Anne had plenty of eligible admirers, but some restless imp of perverseness made her view them with a too critical eye. Moreover, there had been an episode in her life that barred all men from her. So when the news came of her uncle's death and the inheritance of his property in the west, she knew almost at once that she was going out to see that country for herself. If she did not want to stay, there was always Massillon.

And here she was, plunged into the heart of an adventure far more desperate than any she had sought. At breakfast Anne's neighbors avoided any reference to the difficulty at the Sentinel building. Anne knew this must be because they had heard of her part in it. Since she wanted news of the latest developments she put a question to Rufe Jelks.

"Have you heard anything this morning about the trouble?" "The Hat T men have left town. Pulled out late last night. I'll bet they didn't enjoy saying their little piece to Russ Mosely."

Nobody laughed at Rufe's jeer. Nobody made any comment whatever.

"You think he won't approve of what his men did?" Anne said. "He won't like the way they did it," Jelks explained. "Mr. Mosely is our leading citizen. He supports the church, and incidentally his hell-raising riders support the Jumbo, which Russ owns, look, stock and barrel. That makes it nice, because the wages he pays his hands out of one pocket comes back into another. You'll enjoy meeting him, Miss Eliot. He's as smooth as the nap of one of those stovepipe silk hats they wear in the east."

"Don't you think you've said enough, Rufe?" Mrs. Russell asked, her warning gaze on him. "I reckon I have," the cowboy said, his wide friendly grin on the woman at the head of the table. "If I was living in America I could say any doggoned thing I pleased, but here in Roostia with the Czar sitting on his throne up there at the Hat T—"

"You're still talking," the boarding-house keeper reproved. I once knew a man who lived to be a hundred minding his own business."

"That's right," agreed Rufe, helping himself to hashed browned potatoes. "I was reading his epitaph the other day. It said: 'No friends, no enemies. Just no account. Not good enough for Heaven, nor bad enough for hell.'"

As far as Anne could see, the atmosphere around the table was not unfriendly to what the black-haired ranger rider had said. The general feeling seemed to be that critical discussion of Russell Mosely was dangerous and therefore to be avoided.

Jim Silcott called for Anne after breakfast to take her down to the office of the "Sentinel." He wanted to go over the books with her before turning over the plant. Rufe Jelks joined them. He had reclaimed his revolver from the Tivoli and felt a good deal more completely dressed.

The lock of the battered door at the "Sentinel" building was so badly sprung that they could not get in that way. Jim led them around to the rear, got in by the window, and opened the back door for them.

Rufe left the others in the little rear room and with a hammer and saw tried to patch up the front entrance. The editor and the owner went over the finances of the newspaper together, a subject of which Anne quickly tired. She flung it aside with a toss of her curly golden head.

"I never did like figures," she explained. "I'm sure yours are all right. What I want is to have you teach me how to be an editor."

"It will be the blind leading the blind," he replied. "I've been a range rider and a cowboy ever since I left school. After Carl Rogers was killed I jumped in to fill a gap, but I don't know anything about running a paper. Billy Putnam takes care of the printing end of it. I couldn't set a stick of type in a week. All I do is gather news and write and solicit ads."

"Well, how do you write news?" "I don't know the right way, but just stick it down as it comes. Like this: 'Miss Anne Eliot, of Massillon, Ohio, niece of Carl Rogers, the late editor of this paper, came to town Thursday evening to look over the situation. Impressed by the bright future of Blanco, she has decided to stay here and turn the Sentinel into a first-class live paper. Welcome to the Powder Horn country, Miss Eliot. This territory needs more young ladies like you to rub off its rough edges.'"

He smiled at her. "I'm leaving out the flubdub about how beautiful and accomplished you are. The point is to get lots of names into the paper. Folks get a kick out of seeing their names in print. And butter up the paragraphs a little if you can."

"What about this land grant feud? Do I have to take sides?" "No, you can sit on top of the fence and ignore it. That's what a good many editors would do."

"Tell me about the land grants. Is there a right side and a wrong side to it?"

"I think so. You know most of the bare facts, don't you?" "I know the King of Spain gave a big grant to Don Jose Gandara, and that after Mexico was free from Spain the Government through Armijo gave a large part of the Gandara grant to Don Antonio. But my uncle was on the other side, and so are you."

"It's a complicated story. The Gandara grant was an agricultural one, but Don Jose used it only for grazing. He never took up residence on it, though some of his vaqueros probably built huts where they could live while herding cattle."

"Did he have to live on it to make his title good?"

HOW ABOUT LISTING CLUB AND ME DO A SERIES OF COLORED STORIES, ED?

SURE—INTEREST STUFF, CHIEF!

THAT'S RIGHT, AGREE Rufe, helping himself to hashed browned potatoes. "I was reading his epitaph the other day. It said: 'No friends, no enemies. Just no account. Not good enough for Heaven, nor bad enough for hell.'"

As far as Anne could see, the atmosphere around the table was not unfriendly to what the black-haired ranger rider had said. The general feeling seemed to be that

"I know it's a big rich place, but that little squirt don't own it. And I hate to be treated like dirt by a ten-dollar hired hand just because his boss is rich."

Who's That Knocking at My Door

Your Own Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (Aries)—Previous to 7:38 a. m. may be an exciting time when sudden demands may be made with startling force. Between 7:38 a. m. and 7:51 p. m. should be able to do very constructive work in matters of personal advancement, sports and in dealings with people in professional life.

April 20th and May 20th (Taurus)—Previous to 1:30 p. m. favors ordinary affairs, small business transactions or promoting minor deals. After 4:25 p. m. favors new and important undertakings.

May 21st and June 20th (Gemini)—This should be a very favorable day, financially, socially, professionally or in business. This will be a favorable day for asking favors, especially from those in authority, or who are not favored by the public eye.

June 21st and July 22nd (Cancer)—The day favors continuing with routine matters before 4:30 p. m. and considering carefully before undertaking additional responsibilities. After 4:30 p. m. favors conservative transactions, produce and property.

July 23rd and Aug 22nd (Leo)—Monetary affairs may be difficult today. The underlying trend of the entire day is towards unwise optimism, therefore the day does not favor new and important undertakings.

August 23rd and September 22nd (Virgo)—It will be more favorable to wait until 9:25 a. m. has passed to ask for favors. From 9:25 through midnight favors the inauguration of new methods and new ideas that you are trying to accomplish.

September 23rd and October 22nd (Libra)—Business and professional changes are not favored today. Attend to routine.

October 23rd and November 21st (Scorpio)—Before 11:33 a. m. does not favor the quick consummation of affairs. Avoid confusion, uncertainty and be careful of your mental attitude towards those who are at the head of affairs. Caution in eating highly seasoned foods.

November 22nd and December 21st (Sagittarius)—From 8:17 a. m. and throughout the remainder of the day and evening, let nothing hold you down. Encourage all matters that look promising.

December 22nd and January 19th (Capricorn)—The day does not favor important changes. Between 1:24 p. m. and 10:24 p. m. does not favor seeking favors, contacting those in high positions, and may be a time you find you are opposed in your desires.

January 20th and February 18th (Aquarius)—Today should be an excellent time to grasp opportunities. Your efficiency should be increased and favorable results should show themselves in mechanical and industrial activities.

February 19th and March 20th (Pisces)—The entire day favors contracting, real estate, mechanical work, radio, experimenting and unusual and progressive pursuits. Make hay while the sun shines.

Soldiers of the Easter Cross

BENNING WORSHIPS A trumpeter salutes the solemn beauty of Easter dawn as Fort Benning soldiers, forming a living cross, worship in the amphitheater below. High officers and civilian visitors are shown occupying hillside seats in the background. The sunrise service is an annual event at the army post. Three bands, a soldier chapel choir, and buglers furnished music. (Story on Page 10.)

EASTER BEAUTY Here are two charming girls who attended services yesterday. They are Mary Ellen Lightfoot and Jane Taylor, who were snapped at the First Presbyterian church.

DAWN! AND RAIN Defying weather at Grant Field sunrise services were L. E. Hill, Mrs. H. H. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. William Brooker Jr., Mrs. W. J. Reynolds, and Mrs. Jean Pyle.

HER TRIBUTE While early light swept Virginia's hills yesterday, Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt offered a floral cross at the Unknown Soldier's Arlington tomb. The ceremony followed memorial services

TWO ON PARADE Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Hines were among thousands of Atlantans taking part yesterday in the city-wide church parade. They are shown near the Cathedral of St. Philip.

YOUNGER SET There were church-goers of all ages walking to and from Atlanta's beautiful Easter services yesterday. Here are three of the younger misses, Carroll Smith, Clara Jones and Joan Smith, on their way to the ceremonies at the Cathedral of Christ the King.

DRESSED UP TOO Little girls who wouldn't have missed Easter Sunday school for anything. They are at St. Mark Methodist church.

BUNNY Little Mary Kirk Tullis carried her new Easter rabbit to Sunday school.
